AUTO ASSASSIN SHOOTS TWO GIRLS AND MAN AS THEY WALK IN STREET

Attacks Are Made in Widely Separated Sections.

FEDERAL EMPLOYE SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

Eyewitness Tells How Bullets Poured From Unlighted Car.

Two high school girls, walking together in Takoma Park, and a man, who was about to enter his home at 3433 Mount Pleasant street northwest, 3 miles distant, were shot down on the streets last night. The shootings occurred about 30 minutes apart.

Their assailants in both cases, police were told, were riding in sedans. The bullets taken from one of the girls and the man were .32-caliber with a copper jacket.

The two high school students are Miss Helen Andrews, 18 years old, of 5811 Sixth street northwest, and Miss Doris Beall, 16 years old, of 1411 G street southeast.

Miss Andrews was struck twice, both slugs landing in her left arm, one of them fracturing the bone. Miss Beall was wounded in the left leg. The bullet grazed her shin.

Federal Worker Victim.

Gordon T. Backus, 51 years old, of the forestry section of the Department of Agriculture, was more seriously injured when he was struck down in front of his home. A bullet struck him in the back. He is in an undetermined condition at Emergency Hospital.

An attempted shooting was described to police early this morning while investigations of the other two cases were under way. Arthur H. Clephane, civil engineer, of Asheville, N. C., whose Washington address is 2032 Belmont street northwest, said that his life was saved only because the pistol in the hands of an unidentified man misfired.

Mr. Clephane said he had pulled his car to stop on Lanier place near Ontario road northwest, and was just preparing to get out when a man stepped from behind a tree, walked toward the car and leveled a pistol at him.

Intended Victim Escapes.

He said the man pulled the trigger, and he heard the hammer snap on the cartridge. Mr. Clephane hurriedly threw his car in gear and escaped. He said the pistol was either a .32 or .38 caliber.

The shootings followed by 24 hours the gun attack on Henry Abrams in the fashionable upper Sixteenth street northwest section. The men who wounded him three times in the stomach and once in the leg are still at large.

The two girls were first to fall in the mysterious pistol attack. Miss Beall, who is a student at Eastern High School, was spending the night with Miss Andrews, a night student at Business High School and a clerk at a downtown department store.

Attacked Without Warning.

They left the Andrews home about 9:15 o'clock to go to the Takoma Park Public Library. As they reached Fifth and Aspen streets northwest on their way home, the automobile, described to police as a large black sedan, drove up beside them, a fusillade of shots was poured at them and the machine moved rapidly away, leaving them wounded on the sidewalk.

Mrs. R. Wilson, of 6607 Fifth street northwest, was an eye-witness to the shooting.

U.S. PRINTING OFFICE WASTE IS ASSAILED

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Uncle's Sam's engaging little helping-hand pamphlets achieved new circulation records last year, and the Government Printing Office registered a new peace-time production record.

Congress discussed so many matters that the Congressional Record averaged more pages daily than ever before in history, and the various departments of the Federal establishment developed scores of new ways to assist the Nation in repairing its plumbing, storing its hay, dressing its children.

Congressmen used more franked envelopes than ever before in history, and the Printing Office pay roll expanded to 5,043 on December 31, 1931, which is but 264 less than the all-time peak registered during the World War.

In citing these facts in his annual report to Congress, Public Printer George H. Carter, who is the managing head of the largest Government-operated industrial establishment in the world, directed the attention of the Nation to "the avalanche of obsolete and unserviceable publications which have to be disposed of as waste paper to make room for the

Mrs. Gann Calls Slump Dead Issue

Says Condition No Longer Exists and Indorses Hoover.

Chicago, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—The reason a Democrat is a Democrat, said Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of Vice President Curtis, today, "lies in that realm of inscrutable mystery which none can penetrate." Her remark was preliminary to indorsement of President Hoover for reelection in an address before the Chicago Republican Women's Club.

Mrs. Gann predicted the Democrats would take the Republican party to task for the depression, but added: "The opposition will certainly find it difficult to make an issue of a condition that no longer exists."

HOOVER NAMES AIDS IN HOARDING DRIVE

Announces List From Two Score Organizations to Free Idle Funds.

(Associated Press.)

Drawing campaign lines for his war to bring 1,300,000,000 hoarded dollars out of hiding, President Hoover yesterday named representatives from two score national organizations to serve as his war council.

In announcing those summoned to the White House conference on Saturday, the President sounded an echo of his experience in World War days. Many of the organizations and individuals named were those whose help he sought as food administrator.

In the list were Silas Strawn, of Chicago, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Henry Stevens, Warsaw, N. C., national commander of the American Legion; Harry Haas, Philadelphia, president of the American Bankers Association, and Louis J. Taber, Columbus, Ohio, president of the National Grange.

Meanwhile, a note of challenge to the campaign came from Capitol Hill. Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York, called for an official list of "conservative investments and sound banking institutions" in which hoarded money might be placed.

Mr. LaGuardia addressed a letter to Charles G. Dawes, president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, asking if that organization was "in a position to guarantee deposits in the sound banking institutions' mentioned by the President."

In addition to those named, the White House announced the following

$75,000,000 Treasury Issue Oversubscribed

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Mellon announced last night applications totaling $196,873,000 had been received on the tender of $75,000,000 of 93-day Treasury bills dated February 8, and maturing May 11.

The highest bid was 99.450, equivalent to an annual interest rate of about 2.13 per cent. The lowest bid accepted was 99.292. The total amount of bids accepted was $76,399,000.

HOOVER NAMES MILLS TO TAKE MELLON'S POST

Treasury Secretary Plans to Assume Duties in London.

SENATOR LONG VOWS CONFIRMATION FIGHT

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Mellon made ready yesterday to yield to his closest assistant and colleague the office he has held through eleven troubled, significant years, in order to assume new duties as America's envoy to the British government.

Less than 12 hours after announcing that the Treasury head had consented to become Ambassador to Great Britain, President Hoover made known that he would be succeeded by Undersecretary Ogden L. Mills. Assistant Secretary Arthur A. Ballantine will take Mills' place.

Meanwhile, the Senate's newest member, Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, declared himself opposed to both the Mellon and Mills appointments. He said he would endeavor to prevent their confirmation. Administration leaders were unworried, however, and freely predicted approval of the nominations by an overwhelming vote.

Patman Opposes Mellon.

From the House there came a reiteration of Representative Patman's opposition to Mellon. The Texas Democrat is the author of a resolution seeking the Treasury Secretary's impeachment. This is now in the hands of a House subcommittee. Mr. Patman said yesterday the ambassadorship appointment was equivalent to a presidential pardon in the middle of a trial.

The affairs of the Treasury continued as usual yesterday with the Secretary directing its operations from his desk, while Mr. Mills, with the responsibility of handling the Government's financial operations, was in conference with President Hoover. The Undersecretary was with the President when the formal announcement was made of his appointment to the Cabinet.

President Hoover in announcing Mr. Mellon's selection to succeed Charles G. Dawes said he regarded him as the most thoroughly equipped man in the Nation to represent the United States in Great Britain. He will be called upon to grapple with serious questions of international debts and finances.

Secretary Is Pleased.

The Secretary said he looked forward with pleasure to occupying the post and recalled that he had taken an active part in negotiations that led to funding the World War debts and in negotiating the year's moratorium in international debts.

Chatting with newspapermen in his usual free, friendly style, puffing a small cigar and smiling, Mr. Mellon recalled occurences of his term in office and of events leading to his appointment. He revealed for the first time he had not wanted to accept President Harding's offer to name him as Secretary of the Treasury.

Senators, he said, had promised to have the prohibition enforcement work transferred from the Treasury to the Department of Justice, if he would accept the post. The Secretary said that he visited President Harding in Marion, and had told the President-elect that he believed a bet-

BRITAIN ADOPTS GENERAL TARIFF OF 10 PER CENT

Historic Policy of Free Trade Is Thrown Overboard.

AMERICAN IMPORTS GREATLY AFFECTED

London, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—In an historic session of Commons today, Great Britain's free trade policy, the nation's fiscal corner stone for a century, was thrown overboard by Neville Chamberlain, who wore the mantle of his famous father, Joseph, as he proclaimed the financial revolution.

On March 1 a general tariff of 10 per cent will be levied on all h imports with the exception of wheat, meat, fish, grain, cotton and wool under the national government's program.

A tariff commission something like that of the United States will be established to levy additional duties up to 100 per cent.

The United States, in common with every other country exporting to Great Britain, will be greatly affected by the tariff proposals.

Wheat and Cotton Exempt.

Two of America's chief exports to Britain, wheat and raw cotton, are exempted from the flat 10 per cent duties which will be imposed. Imports from the United States which already pay a duty under the "McKenna" or other measures also will be immune.

All other American commodities imported into Britain, however, will have to pay the basic 10 per cent, failing announcement of some further exemptions. It was assumed tonight that some of them would come within the categories which the Treasury, working in conjunction with the advisory committee, will mark down for further tariffs.

The question of these additional duties, however, is obscure and there has been no indication as to what commodities the Treasury and the Tariff Commission will decide should bear additional duties over and above the initial 10 per cent.

Preferential treatment for British Dominions will be worked out at an imperial conference in Ottawa in June, but meanwhile the Dominions will be unaffected.

McKenna Duties Unaffected.

Existing tariffs, such as the present levy of 33 1-3 per cent on automobiles, known as the McKenna duties, will remain unaffected as will present duties on tobacco, tea, sugar and coffee.

The main object of this fiscal resolution is to correct Britain's adverse balance of trade of $500,000,000 and to give further impetus to a new spirit of British empire unity.

In its long history the House of Commons has rarely witnessed a scene such as that which came late this afternoon when Chamberlain made his two-hour speech. He ended in an emotional perforation devoted to his mother's memory.

Nearly the whole house rose and cheered him several minutes. One little island of 50 Laborites and a few die-hard Free Trade Liberals remained seated in a sea of cheering, waving members of Parliament.

Ghosts of Past Seen Near.

London was blanketed in a fog and the political ghosts of generations past—Cobden, Gladstone, Disraeli and Joseph Chamberlain—seemed to hover

JAPAN SEIZES HARBIN; CHAPEI RUINS SHELLED; NEW PEACE MOVE NEAR

REPLY IS SURPRISE TO MOST OBSERVERS

Her Willingness to Consider Further Suggestions Is Held Encouraging.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

Diplomatic consultations among the United States and the three allies in Shanghai—England, France and Italy—will shortly be resorted to in an effort to work out some alternative peace plan to replace the Anglo-American proposal rejected yesterday by Japan, it was learned here last night. Reports of the intensified attack on the Chinese quarter of Shanghai with larger guns and the landing of Japanese troops accelerated the peace plans of the allies.

There was no disguising the disappointment felt in official quarters over the summary rejection of the Anglo-American peace overtures. In covert diplomatic language, attention was focused on the encouraging aspects of the note rather than on the deliberate refusal of the Japanese government to accept the proposal in toto.

The Japanese government summarily rejected the fifth point of the peace offer, which was based on the league council's resolution of December 10, and then made such untenable reservations regarding the second point that it is likewise invalidated. The second point provided that there should be no further mobilization in the vicinity of Shanghai.

Says Promises Broken.

"In view of the unreliability of the Chinese troops with regard to promises of demobilization, it is impossible for the Japanese government to accept this article." In this fashion the foreign minister with the full approval of the war lords curtly disposed of the second article.

The full text of the Japanese reply is still in process of transmission although a resume of the reply was received yesterday at the State Department from American Ambassador to Tokyo W. Cameron Forbes.

Secretary Stimson, after reading the latest reports of the Shanghai situation, spent some time yesterday afternoon in going over the topographical and strategical features of the city of Shanghai and the environs with the expert aid of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the U. S. Army, Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, Dr. Stanley Kuhl Hornbeck, chief of the division of

Chapei Fighting Costs Many Chinese Lives

Shanghai, Friday, Feb. 5 (A.P.). Recent fighting in the vicinity of North Station in Chapei has cost the Chinese 1,000 dead and wounded, it was reported today.

The Chinese Red Cross said 300 wounded were being treated in Chinese hospitals in the Chinese portions of Shanghai and that 210 were in hospitals of the International Settlement. Forty additional were accounted for at Woosung.

PLANE AND 8 DEAD OCCUPANTS FOUND

Charred Remains of Ship Is Discovered in California Mountains.

Los Angeles, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Victim of a terrific storm, the Century Pacific cabin air liner which vanished a week ago en route here from Bakersfield, Calif., was found late today in the Tehachapi Mountains, 4 miles northwest of Lebec, a charred funeral pyre holding the bodies of Pilot J. V. Sandbloom and his seven passengers.

The wreckage was found by Paul Apodaca, Tejon ranch worker, on the north slope of the Johnson Canyon. Apodaca said he could see what he believed to be the bodies of the passengers huddled in the cabin. A coroner was en route to the scene from Bakersfield.

The victims were: Mrs. Margaret Fickeisen, San Diego; Nita McGrath, 32, Berkeley, Calif., business woman; Miss Marie Sweeney Combs, 18, Hollywood usherettee; J. H. Polhemus, 55, San Francisco, coffee dealer; W. H. Smith, 40, San Francisco, retired business man; Frank Dewar, 48, chief deputy sheriff of Los Angeles; Spencer Swan, 71, Pomona, Calif.; J. V. Sandbloom, 42, Glendale, Calif., the pilot.

Sandbloom had a solo record of more than 4,400 hours to his credit.

Apodaca's story was soon verified by a searching party led by Ray Bedwell, of the fish and game commission, and Deputy Sheriff Casey Jones, who went with the range rider from Lebec and found the charred bodies of the three men and five women in the twisted wreckage. Other parties, equipped with snowshoes and leading pack horses, immediately started from Lebec to bring out the bodies.

Several planes left Los Angeles for the scene as soon as word of the

Garner Orders Gavel That Will Not Break

Elkhorn, Wis., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Speaker Jack Garner's penchant for breaking gavels while presiding over the House of Representatives may soon be checked. Halfred Olson, an Elkhorn woodworker, announced tonight he has received an order from Speaker Garner for a special unbreakable gavel carved out of black walnut and treated with Olson's "shrunkenwood" process.

"I am told Garner broke three gavels in one week," Olson said, "but I think I can make one that'll hold him."

Japanese in Hankow Are Erecting Defenses

Hankow, China (Friday), Feb. 5 (A.P.).—Japanese in Hankow, where Chinese animosity toward them has been keen since the Shanghai fighting broke out, worked feverishly to fortify their concession today.

Barbed wire barricades and sandbag fortifications were thrown up. No Japanese ventured outside the concession. Japanese who evacuated Shasi had reached Ichang and it was believed they might come farther down the Yangtze River.

Some of Refugees Return to Nanking

Nanking, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Nanking, evacuated by British and American women and children yesterday following a bombardment by Japanese warships, was returning to normal today. Some of the refugees came back to the city. Merchants reported that stocks of rice were large and that more foodstuffs were expected.

A paper shortage developed, and newspapers were issued in reduced size. They advised the public to remain calm and gave "lessons" in what to do for self-protection in case of another bombardment.

Local public organizations issued a long manifesto to "all peace-loving friendly nations" asking them to uphold justice and fair play in the Sino-Japanese controversy.

Chinese Retreating After Stubborn Battle in Manchuria.

SOVIET RAIL HEADS IN SPECIAL MEETING

Seven U. S. Vessels Reach Shanghai as Tokyo Begins Terrific Attack.

Shanghai, Friday, Feb. 5 (A.P.).—Artillery shells from the battle of Chapei were reported to have fallen within residential areas, patrolled by United States Marines in the northwest part of Shanghai today. Marine headquarters said the shelling was endangering the inhabitants of those areas. They said they were unable to determine whether the shells were from Japanese or from Chinese guns.

Headquarters of Ting Chao, the Chinese leader, were deserted. It was believed he and his higher officers already had left the city.

Japanese and Chinese artillery made Harbin a battleground during the night in a stiff bombardment that ceased shortly after midnight, indicating a Chinese retreat had begun.

Several Japanese shells exploded near the headquarters building of the Chinese Eastern Railway in the "old town" of Harbin. Soviet Russian officials of the railroad held an emergency meeting to consider the situation.

Chinese Reply to Fire.

The Chinese had placed two field guns in an open area immediately in front of the railroad's headquarters and opened fire in reply to the Japanese attack. Japanese authorities said they thought the Chinese placed the guns there in a hope of embroiling Japan with Soviet Russia.

The Chinese offered stubborn resistance to the Japanese advance, which began with heavy fighting at 3 p. m. yesterday. But after Japanese airplanes bombed the Chinese positions, Ting Chao's men broke and fled toward the frozen Sungari River, except for a small detachment.

Japanese residents of Harbin remained all night long in refuge stations awaiting dawn and the arrival of their troops. They had clustered on top of buildings during the afternoon to see and hear the conflict. They cheered and waved Japanese flags when Japanese airplanes flew over Harbin.

Successful Completion.

Japan's occupation of Harbin means that the last important city in Manchuria has passed into her hands and that a military adventure that began last September has at least reached a successful completion.

Harbin is the most valuable city in central Manchuria and is second only to Mukden in population. It is the headquarters of the Sino-Russian Chinese Eastern Railway and the shipping center for a rich wheat and soya bean region. It is the hub of the so-called Russian "zone of influence."

A week ago Acting Foreign Commissar Karakhan in Moscow informed Japanese Ambassador Hirota that Russia might be forced to protest if Japanese troops entered the city. Previously Russia had warned Japan against using the Chinese Eastern Railway for transporting her troops to the scene, but later waived her objections.

Chinese guns shot down a Japanese airplane over Chapei. The plane burned when it fell. It was the first

Norwegian Cabinet Member Attacked

Defense Minister Beaten, but Escapes Knives; Thugs Flee.

Oslo, Norway, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—An attack on Maj. Quisling, Norwegian minister of defense, in which one or more of his assailants first tried to stab the minister, then threw pepper in his face and knocked him unconscious, was disclosed in a police statement tonight. A reward of 5,000 kroner (about $900) has been offered.

When the minister went to his office late Tuesday afternoon to fetch some documents, the police statement said, he was suddenly set upon by one or more unidentified persons.

"On entering his private office, which was in darkness, an attempt was made to stab the minister in the back with a knife," the police said. "He succeeded in evading the knife, but received a violent blow on the head, and at the same time pepper was thrown in his face. The minister lost consciousness and while he was lying on the floor the assailants escaped."

Catholic U. English Head Commends Essay Contest

Dr. Lennox Asserts Post's Project for Study of George Washington's History Valuable Also for Mind Training of Young.

The Washington Post in promoting an essay contest on the subject of George Washington is rendering a very great service to the school children of the District of Columbia and of nearby Virginia and Maryland, according to Dr. P. J. Lennox, head of the department of English language and literature at the Catholic University of America.

In a statement commending the contest Dr. Lennox further declared last night:

"The impetus thus given to investigation into the early history of these United States would, of itself alone, be ample justification for such a contest, because of the training thereby imparted to the youthful mind. But, in addition, there is naturally to be considered the patriotic sentiment that must necessarily be inspired and strengthened by a study of the career of him who by his exploits in the field and his wisdom in the council chamber easily won his place as "first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Dr. Lennox is one of a group of leading educators of the city who have joined in praise of The Post Washington Essay Contest, which was officially indorsed by the Board of Education of the city in a session held several weeks ago. For thus offering to the students eligible to compete a chance to put in their own words their ideas about George Washington the educational world has expressed commendation for The Post Essay plan.

"The contest," continued Dr. Lennox, "is bound to have another de-

The next to the last state reception of the season was held last evening in the White House. It was the largest this winter with the exception of the diplomatic reception, the first of the series. The party last night was for the officials of the Treasury, Postoffice, Interior, Commerce and Labor Departments, and the company of more than 1,500 was increased by many officers of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. All the officers were in uniform.

The arrangements were much the same as at previous receptions, although the guests made a procession through the red corridor from the east room instead of from the stairway, into the state dining room, thence through the red parlor to the blue room, where they greeted the Chief Executive and First Lady. It was a long line of guests with unusually beautiful clothes.

There were but few absentees from the presidential procession to the blue parlor, the Vice President and Secretary Mellon walking together, and Mrs. Lamont being escorted by Col. Ulio, while Secretary Lamont took the

Dying in Sahara of Thirst, Three Fliers Radio for Aid

Oran, Algiers, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Three French aviators, lost in the heart of the Sahara Desert, pleaded for water today by radio, but were unable to tell military planes searching for them just where they were.

The three fliers, Jean Reginesi, Robert Lenier and Joseph Touge, were lost Monday when a sandstorm forced their plane down and obliterated the caravan trail they had been following through the shifting sands.

Working desperately, they managed to get their radio operating and into communication with Oran and Paris. Help was sent out at once, but no one knew where to look, since all the stricken fliers could say was that they were lost somewhere "near the heart of the desert."

Their water supply came to an end two days ago and today their thirst had become intolerable. From the radio messages sent out at hourly intervals the authorities learned that their sufferings for water, even while they were communicating with Paris, had become so acute as to dull their

JAPANESE IS BACKED BY U.S. ARMS GROUP

Geneva, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—The Sino-Japanese dispute suddenly entered the limelight before the world disarmament conference today, but was just as suddenly whisked off the stage without serious issue.

The Far Eastern trouble was brought into focus by Dr. Salvador de Madariaga, the Spanish delegate, who tried to blackball a Japanese who had been proposed for one of the vice presidencies of the world gathering.

The American delegation became involved when the noted Spaniard, apparently intent on punishing Japan for activities in China, intimated he had the support of the American representatives.

Gibson Assures Japanese.

Apprised of the fact that Dr. de Madariaga was canvassing the delegates in his blackball effort, Hugh Gibson, of the American delegation, promptly made a public visit to Tsuneo Matsudaira, Japanese Ambassador to London, who had been proposed for Japan's vice presidential position. M. Matsudaira was assured that there was no effort by the Americans to deprive him of a seat.

Shortly thereafter the commission adopted the report of the procedure committee and the Japanese were represented in it. Others of the big powers selected for the seven "big power" vice presidencies were the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Russia.

Russia's nomination also placed the Americans in an embarassing position. They preferred to vote for Spain because the United States has no diplomatic relations with Russia. They refrained, however, from forcing the issue in the interests of harmony and because of the earlier difficulty over the Japanese seat.

Post of Great Importance.

The post of vice president is of great importance because of the frail health of President Arthur Henderson, the British delegate, who might at any time be forced to withdraw from the conference. As the matter stands the first delegates of the big power group will each be represented in the vice presidential tier and ballots will be taken for seven other seats to be held by minor powers. The Roumanian, M. Titulescu, seemed to have been agreed on as ranking vice president.

Before adjournment until tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. the conference attended to much other business in its short session today. A routine of procedure to be followed throughout was approved, a conference bureau was created, and arrangements were completed for Saturday's plenary session.

Millions of peace petitions will be received at the plenary meeting.

in the shadowy recesses of the crowded chamber. One of the elder Chamberlain's sons was carrying into effect his father's life ambition—tariffs linked with imperial preference, and thus did Neville refer to his father, speaking with obvious emotion:

"I believe he would have found consolation in the bitterness of his disappointment that these proposals, the climax of his own conception, should be made before the House of Commons which he loved, in the presence of one and by the lips of the other of his two immediate successors in name."

His other son, Sir Austin, wearing monocle and tall silk hat, and bearing striking resemblance to his father, sat in the elder Chamberlain's old seat and nodded approval. High up in the ladies' gallery sat Joseph Chamberlain's widow, an American-born woman.

Tickets to the House of Commons were worth their weight in gold today. The distinguished strangers' gallery was jammed with diplomats, among them Ray Atherton, American charge d'affaires.

(Associated Press.)

Commerce Department officials yesterday said the plan of the British government to levy a 10 per cent duty on most imports into Great Britain except raw materials had been expected.

The only question in their minds was whether the 10 per cent will replace the abnormal importation act duties of 50 per cent recently applied to a large group of items. Approximately 25 per cent of manufactured goods imported into England already are dutiable.

The United States exported to Great Britain during 1931 a total of $455,560,614. If the final tabulation of products, which has not been completed, corresponds to that of the previous year, approximately 50 per cent of the total would be raw materials and similar items. Manufactures exported usually total about half of American shipments to Great Britain.

During 1930 the United States exported $678,104,895 worth of goods to Great Britain. Of this amount $23,800,000 was wheat, $8,500,000 was wheat flour, $5,700,000 barley, $58,000,000 meats of various kinds, and $92,000,000 cotton. These items, it was indicated, will not be made dutiable.

Of the remaining exports, approximately $226,000,000 based on the 1930 figures are now dutiable. This would leave approximately $250,000,000 worth of exports still subject to future duties.

disaster for Japanese fliers in the battle thus far.

The plane, which had been bombing Chinese positions, apparently was struck either by a machine gun bullet or a shell from a small field gun, which the Chinese were using against the fliers.

Nanking dispatches today said two squadrons of Chinese airplanes, comprising eighteen machines, had left for Shanghai "to cooperate with Chinese forces" defending that city.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

Shanghai, Feb. 5 (Friday) (A.P.).—Seven United States destroyers steamed into Shanghai Harbor today to hear guns, of China and Japan roaring in the biggest battle yet for mastery of the devastated city.

Judging from the thunder of the guns the Japanese were using 6-inch projectiles in their effort to blast stubborn Chinese defenders out of the burning ruins of Chapei and strongholds along the Shanghai-Woosung front.

Under rolling masses of red-brown smoke from scores of fires in the northern area of the city the Japanese pierced Chinese lines and drove their wedge ahead only to be pushed back by a withering Chinese fire.

The lines of the two forces appeared unchanged as the fighting continued with heavy losses on both sides.

The Japanese lost no time after day broke to launch anew their terrific attack. Machine gunners and artillery forces, already active ahead of the Japanese bombing planes, constantly sent screaming shells and rattling bullets through the air to burst and splatter in the Chapei battleground.

The smoke and pillars of dust raised by high explosives falling all yesterday and all night thickened the pall over the Chinese forces, already heavy with low-hanging storm clouds.

The American destroyers, arriving from Manila, began taking up positions in various parts of Shanghai Harbor. They are the Smith Thompson, Whipple, Pope, Barker, Peary, John D. Edwards and John D. Ford.

The British cruiser Kent arrived shortly afterward, bringing Admiral Sir W. A. H. Kelly, commander of the British squadron in China. The Kent came from Hongkong with a battery of field artillery aboard.

The heavy shelling started 40 minutes after midnight. Shells exploded at the rate of one a minute, rattling the doors and windows of houses 3 miles away.

Cease After Hour.

After an hour the heavy guns ceased firing, but 3-inch pieces and machine guns were kept in action. At 3:15 a. m. quiet descended on the battlefield. Only the crack of a sniper's rifle here and there could be heard.

With the breaking of dawn three hours later the guns got busy again. Shells screamed through the air and burst in the Chapei battleground, where machine guns again had taken up their rat-tat-tat.

Reports circulating this morning said three Japanese cruisers were lying off Liuho, 35 miles northwest of Shanghai, within the lower Yangtze. This, coupled with Tokyo reports that a division of Japanese soldiers was on the way to China, led to a belief the Japanese were planning to land forces near Liuho, where they would have an open path to Shanghai.

In the event of such a movement, Chinese along the Shanghai-Woosung Railway would find the enemy at their rear. An excellent motor highway from Liuho to Shanghai would make an advance on Shanghai easy and rapid.

A wall of fire a mile long lighted the sky over Chapei. Smoke and fumes from the conflagration were swept down on the International Settlement by a cold north wind. The Chinese looked for a final desperate push on the part of the Japanese to clear out the last stronghold in Chapei before many more hours.

Tse Chin College, a well-known Chinese school in the Japanese-occupied district of Hongkew, was destroyed by flames early today. Chinese said the Japanese entered the four-story dormitory of the school and set fire to the furniture and then put the torch to the institution's other two buildings.

More U. S. Marines.

Fresh detachments of the United States Marines, brought in on the cruiser Houston, took their places in the International Settlement guard line. They found Shanghai a cold city in comparison with Manila and tropical uniforms were discarded for wools and long underwear.

The United States transport Chaumont was expected from Manila today with 1,200 members of the Thirty-first Infantry and about 100 additional Marines. These new forces will bring the total United States strength here to almost 6,000 men. When all the United States naval vessels en route to Shanghai arrive, there will be a total of 17 American warships in the Whangpoo.

The American troops will be billeted in the heart of the business district within a giant amusement hall known as the "New World," where British troops were quartered during the crisis of 1927 in which Chinese nationalist armies threatened to overrun Shanghai.

The Marines had a hard time keeping off thousands of Chinese refugees who stormed the gates to bridges over Soochow Creek in a vain attempt to get into the International Settlement. Only persons holding passes were admitted, for the settlement already was swarming with refugees estimated to total 1,000,000.

The International Settlement Municipal Council asked United States Consul Edwin S. Cunningham, as the senior consular official in Shanghai, to protest to the Japanese authorities, declaring the Japanese naval forces were unjustly interfering with the civil administration of the northern and eastern portions of the settlement.

Residents have been frightened and the public services have been disrupted by the Japanese landing parties, the council said, charging police had been deprived of their firearms and firemen obstructed and assaulted in the performance of their duty.

Japanese naval officials denied reports that Admiral Shiosawa, who has been ordered by the Tokyo government to relinquish command of the attacking forces here, had committed suicide.

POWERS' NEW STEP FOR PEACE IN SHANGHAI ARE DUE SOON

Large Maps Scanned.

Large maps showing all natural relief of the city were brought before the Secretary and his advisers and more than an hour was spent in going over the tactical problems which will confront Rear Admiral Montgomery M. Taylor, who will now assume direction of the allied forces in view of his superior rank.

The Japanese reply to the good offices of the United States and Great Britain came as an unpleasant surprise to most observers. In view of the initiative of both combatants for neutral peace proposals, a more conciliatory result had been looked for.

Neither the United States nor Great Britain obtruded diplomatic peace proposals. The first suggestion for a peace plan came from Nanking and preceded similar overtures from the Japanese foreign office by a few hours. It had been expected that some Japenes reservations would be made, but in no case was it anticipated that the reservations would be of the major importance which they have assumed in the Japanese formal reply.

Further Suggestions.

The saving grace of the Tokyo reply was the opportunity it afforded future negotiations. The Japanese foreign minister, Kenkichi Yoshizawa, declared to the Ambassadors of Great Britain, France, Italy and the United States:

"We will welcome any further suggestions you care to make regarding conditions of peace."

This was hailed as an encouraging sign of possible future developments. The acceptance of the Chinese government at Nanking had raised the hopes of all the allies that some such similar action by the Japanese would follow. Japanese and Chinese acceptance of the peace plan would automatically halt all further hostilities. Instead, the situation in Shanghai has become suddenly intensified by the sudden appearance of Japanese reinforcements in Shanghai in an eleventh-hour effort to dislodge the persistent Chinese soldiers before any definite peace project halts the march of operations.

Foreign Minister Yoshizawa's statement to the allied ambassadors leaves the door open for future negotiations and although it will take several days before the next step is finally decided upon, the ultimate hope of peace is not despaired of.

Some encouragement was derived from the reports of the American Marine commandant, Col. Hooker, in Shanghai, that the Japanese marines had completely evacuated the American sector yesterday at 10 o'clock in the evening. Furthermore, the large force of Japanese marines hitherto required to police the valuable cotton mills owned by Japanese banks but situated in the American concession of the International Settlement have also been withdrawn. American Marines are now in complete possession of all the defenses within the territorial limits of the American defense area at Shanghai.

The text of the Japanese reply to the good offices of London and Washington was conveyed in substance to the Secretary of State yesterday afternoon by the Japanese ambassador himself. The resume forwarded the Department of State was essentially the same.

Made in Definite Form.

The acceptance by the Japanese government of points one, three and four was declared and the reservations for point two and five made in definite form. It was also pointed out in this connection yesterday that some allowance should be made for the element of "face" in the Japanese proposals which plays no inconsiderable part in any Oriental negotiation.

The defense offered by the Chinese soldiers to the Japanese attack has been the subject of considerable comment in military and tactical circles here where the superior force and equipment of the Japanese troops had been counted upon to effect the speedy surrender of the Chinese defenses at Shanghai. Japanese susceptibilities over their apparent failure to produce direct and positive results in the Shanghai siege must be taken into consideration in the adoption of any articles of agreement.

Shanghai-Manila Phone Cable Break Being Fixed

New York, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—New York officials of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. said today transpacific cable service had not been disrupted, although the cable unit between Shanghai and Manila was out of commission.

They had not yet received, they said, a "clear report" as to the cause of the break, though press dispatches attributed it to shell fire. Transpacific cables, company officials said, are being routed via Hongkong to Manila, thence to the United States. "Traffic is being handled without delay, even considering the largely increased volume," they added.

TOKYO SENDS ARMY DIVISION TO FRONT

Ignores Protest of Powers on Mobilizing to Relieve 5,000 Sailors.

Tokyo, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—The Japanese government today ordered a full division of the army to Shanghai to relieve the 5,000 bluejackets who have been fighting it out with the Chinese for a week.

This decision was in line with the government's rejection of the item of the peace proposals, made by the United States, Great Britain and France, which called upon Japan and China to cease mobilization and preparations for further hostilities.

A full Japanese army division is composed of two brigades of infantry, a regiment of cavalry, a regiment of artillery, a battalion of engineers and a battalion of the army service corps. The total strength is about 11,000 men. Hitherto all the fighting in Shanghai has been done by Japanese bluejackets.

In ordering the division to Shanghai the cabinet approved a recommendation submitted by Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Gen. Araki, minister of war, and Admiral Osumi, minister of the navy.

The Japanese reply to the peace proposals submitted by the powers in which two of the suggestions were rejected and three others were conditionally accepted, was handed to the ambassadors of the three nations by Foreign Minister Yoshizawa this evening.

In the reply the Japanese agreed to cease hostile acts in Shanghai if they received assurances that the Chinese would "immediately and completely cease their menacing and disturbing activities."

In addition to rejecting the powers' proposal that preparation for further hostilities cease, Japan refused to permit mediation by the powers in the conflict with China, especially insofar as that mediation might touch upon the status of Manchuria.

Japan agreed to cease military action in Shanghai if adequately assured the Chinese would do likewise, accepted negotiations for the mutual withdrawal of the warring forces, and approved the creation of a neutral zone in the Chapei battleground.

Text of Tokyo's Answer.

Authoritative Japanese quarters appeared convinced that before diplomatic attempts to settle the Shanghai issues could bear fruit, a solution already would have been achieved through other agencies.

The Japanese reply was presented to the three ambassadors—W. Cameron Forbes for the United States, Count Demartel for France and Sir Francis Lindley, for Great Britain—after it had been approved by the cabinet, by Emperor Hirohito and by Prince Saionji, the only "elder statesman" still living.

"First, the Japanese forces at Shanghai will cease hostile acts if it is assured that the Chinese forces will immediately and completely cease their menacing and disturbing activities. If, on the contrary, the Chinese, including both the regular and nonuniformed forces, persist in such activities the Japanese government must preserve its freedom of action for its military forces.

Chinese Held Unreliable.

"Second, in view of the unreliability of the Chinese in the past and the gravity of the present situation the Japanese government finds it impossible to renounce mobilization or preparations for hostilities.

"Third, the Japanese government has no objection to its consul general and commander at Shanghai entering into negotiations for an agreement concerning separation of the respective forces and, if necessary, the establishment of a neutral zone in the district of Chapei.

"Fourth, while it is to be presumed that the phrase 'all pending questions between Japan and China' includes the Manchurian question, the Japanese government regards this latter as entirely separate from the Shanghai affair and, moreover, as covered by a resolution of the League of Nations Council on December 10, 1931.

Wants No Neutrals' Aid.

"Furthermore, it is a settled policy of the Japanese government not to accept assistance of neutral observers or participants in the settlement of questions concerning Manchuria. For these reasons the condition embodied in paragraph 5 of the powers' note is not acceptable to the Japanese government."

Use of the western section of the Chinese Eastern Railway in Manchuria for Japanese troop movements from Tsitsihar to Harbin was discussed by Alexander Troyanovsky, Soviet Ambassador to Japan, and the Japanese foreign minister.

It was understood the Russian Ambassador pointed out that a further agreement would have to be completed before the Japanese might utilize the road. Russia already has conditionally agreed to the use of the Changchun-Harbin spur for Japanese military purposes.

The foreign office did not consider these new representations by Russia to be a protest. The ambassador, it was said, acted without specific instructions from Moscow and his visit to the foreign minister was entirely friendly.

U. S. Forces' Food Bill $20,000 Weekly in China

(Associated Press.)

It will cost the Government $60,000 to feed the Army, Navy and Marine forces in Shanghai for three weeks.

Rear Admiral Joseph J. Cheatham, paymaster general of the Navy, took only 26 hours to communicate with Admiral M. M. Taylor, commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet, and buy food for 6,000 men.

A three weeks' supply will be loaded on the President Taft, sailing from Seattle February 6, and will be used by the American contingent after February 23.

The order includes 80,000 pounds of beef, 12,000 pounds of veal, 6,000 pounds of pork sausage, 6,000 pounds of frankfurters, 15,000 pounds of pork loin, 8,000 pounds of fowl, 10,000 pounds of butter, 20,000 pounds of onions, 230,000 pounds of potatoes, 20,000 pounds of apples, 20,000 pounds of oranges and 6,000 dozen eggs.

Officers Elected By Medical Club

Dr. Georges Portmann, of University of Bordeaux, Is Heard at Dinner.

The International Medical Club entertained at dinner last night in honor of Dr. George Portmann, professor of laryngology at the University of Bordeaux, at the Mayflower Hotel. Mr. Pares, secretary of the French Embassy, represented the Ambassador of France, who was unable to attend in person.

Dr. Portmann, noted surgeon, is visiting America for a few weeks. Both he and Mr. Pares made short addresses between the courses of the dinner.

Election of officers for 1932 followed the dinner and the choice was as follows: President, Dr. A. B. Bennett; first vice president, Dr. A. C. Christie; second vice president, Dr. Walter Teichmann; third vice president, Dr. Joseph S. Wall; secretary, Dr. P. S. Constantinople; treasurer, Dr. Thomas Cajigas; historian, Dr. D. F. Penhallow.

Bay Rum as Drink Presents Problem

Dr. Doran Says Curbing It Is Difficult; Hits Use as Beverage.

Following notification of Washington merchants that sale of bay rum as a beverage is illegal, Dr. James M. Doran, commissioner of industrial alcohol, admitted that enforcement of this phase of the Federal prohibition law is difficult.

Inspectors of the Industrial Alcohol Bureau warned merchants after receipt of numerous protests against continued drinking of bay rum, sale of which as a lotion is legal.

Declaring that bay rum, which is denatured, is unfit to drink, Dr. Doran declared "If the country's going to take to that stuff you might as well give the country back to the Indians."

CHURCH TO DISCUSS SUSPENDED PASTOR

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 4.—A conference of members of the official board of Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, Annapolis, is being arranged by the Rev. Dr. Chasteen Smith, superintendent of the Baltimore district, to discuss the situation resulting from the suspension from ministerial duty of the Rev. Dr. Joseph T. Herson, pastor of the church, it was announced here today.

It also announced that Dr. Smith will preach the sermon before the local congregation Sunday morning. It is expected the conference will be held some time during the day.

Meanwhile, Dr. Herson stands charged with "imprudent and unministerial conduct," befitting a cleric, and his suspension from duty will extend until his trial before a committee of ministers at the annual meeting of the Baltimore Conference in June.

Details Are Lacking.

Details concerning the nature of the charges have not been revealed, although high church officials have stated they do not involve "immorality or theft," or anything of the like. The case has been hanging in the balance for some time, it is said.

Dr. Herson, a former pastor of Hamline M. E. Church, Washington, later was paster of St. Mark's Church, Forrest Park, Baltimore, and was suddenly transferred from there to Annapolis last October. Dr. Herson has made no comment concerning the matter, other than to say that "if and when he makes a statement it will be of interest to the Methodists of Baltimore." He is following the advice of counsel, a fellow minister.

That Dr. Herson may eventually take civil action in the premises was indicated in a statement made by his wife, who was among several witnesses who appeared in his behalf before a committee of Baltimore ministers at a preliminary investigation of the matter.

Statement by Wife.

Mrs. Herson said: "Agitation in St. Mark's Church has been the outgrowth of years. I am certainly behind Dr. Herson in this matter and want the public to know the real truth of the situation. It has been admitted by clergymen that the charges would not stand a moment in any civil court. Dr. Herson will not make a statement now, but will later. He is planning to take civil action in the case."

In the meantime members of the congregation of Calvary Church have been deeply aroused, even though unaware of the circumstances of the matter. Open resentment has been expressed, particularly on the point that Dr. Herson should have been transferred from his charge at St. Mark's to Annapolis, to be followed by announcement of such an affair. In the few months that he has been here Dr. Herson has won the high esteem of his congregation and citizens generally.

PLANE AND 8 DEAD FOUND IN MOUNTAINS

end of the six-day search was received here.

Scores of airplanes quickly were made available and their number grew. Hundreds of men on foot, many of them equipped with snowshoes and others on horseback, were enlisted from Los Angeles and many mountain communities.

Saturday, the day following the air liner's disappearance, a snow reaching 2 feet in depth fell in the mountains. The storm's fury continued through Sunday and Monday, bringing the hunt almost to a halt. Hope was abandoned that those aboard the missing plane would be found alive.

The storm broke slightly Tuesday and nearly 150 ships, including Army aircraft from March Field, Navy planes from San Diego, Naval Reserve ships from Long Beach and California National Guard ships from Glendale, soared over a wilderness area of 500 square miles. Yesterday was a better flying day. Although new areas were covered and new reports checked the searchers became more discouraged.

Search from the air for the Army bombing airplane which vanished in a storm Monday with Lieut. Edward A. Hoffman was halted late today because of gathering clouds. Forty-five Army airplanes, which flew over the Sierra Nevadas from Huntington Lake to Greenhorn Mountain and as far east as Mount Whitney failed to find any trace of the missing aviator.

Undiscovered 17 Hours After Crash, Pilot Dies

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Francis H. Rust, 34, Thompson Aeronautical Corporation air mail pilot, who lay near his wrecked plane for seventeen hours Tuesday in the wooded area north of Marcellus, his leg broken and severely bruised, died this morning in Bronson Hospital here.

Rust crashed when caught in a snow squall after leaving Marcellus on a Kalamazoo-to-Chicago flight. He jumped when he saw a crash was inevitable, but was too low for his parachute to open properly. His fall was broken by trees and bushes. Searching parties, unable to prosecute their hunt by air due to the weather, did not locate him until Tuesday afternoon.

EFFORT IS SPURRED BY CHEST WORKERS

Colladay Confident Needed $216,000 Will Be Raised by Tuesday.

Grim determination marked the movements of the Community Chest "army" yesterday, striding forward in quest of the $216,000 still necessary to complete the $2,601,000 needed for the 1932 Chest. Reports were scattering, coming mostly from individual workers who declined to make any other report than that of "progress."

A number of additional gifts, some of them original and some from those who had already given, were received at Chest headquarters at 223 Investment Building, and at the Gridiron room, Willard Hotel, which is the headquarters of the information unit and where gifts may be sent. These were sent by persons who had read that the Chest had failed to reach its goal on the closing night and who expressed concern and in offering these contributions to help attain the goal.

Chairman Edward F. Colladay received encouraging word from both H. L. Rust, jr., chairman of the metropolitan unit, and Lloyd B. Wilson, chairman of the group solicitation unit, each of whom had received word during the day that their workers were still on the job and making definite progress toward next Tuesday's final report meeting at the Willard.

Points Out Importance.

"We had to go over two days last year," Chairman Colladay said, "and we more than reached our goal. I still believe that the money is here. I still have faith that Washington, knowing that we are expected to set an example for the rest of the Nation, will not fail the Chest. I just can not conceive that our people, knowing the emergency that confronts the Capital and knowing the vital necessity for raising every dollar asked by the Chest, can or will permit this great humanitarian proposition to fail.

"I wish to reiterate that if there is a man or woman in Washington who has not given to the Chest and who can give, that it is his or her duty to come forward and give, without further solicitation; that if there is a man or woman in Washington who has given and who can afford to give more, it is his or her duty to come forward and give more. There can be no half measures. This budget of $2,601,000 was not submitted to the public until it had been most carefully scanned by a committee of our most prominent citizens and that amount determined upon as the minimum with which human welfare needs in Washington could be met. That is why I say we need every dollar, and I hope to hear, next Tuesday, that every dollar has been subscribed."

Chest officials held that the bad weather of yesterday would be a help to those Chest workers who braved it, in that people would be at home when the metropolitan unit workers called and that group solicitation key men would find more time to see their fellow workers.

PARLIAMENT OPENED IN POMP AT OTTAWA

Lord Bessborough Declares Canada's Status Sound; Waterway Mentioned.

Ottawa, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—With all the pomp and display of a great pageant, Canada's Parliament opened today. Richly-gowned ladies waited for hours to gain admittance to the Senate galleries where supreme court judges in robes of scarlet and ermine, and officers of the army and navy in brilliant uniforms studded with medals and decorations, participated in colorful ceremonies.

Cannons boomed a salute when Lord Bessborough, the governor-general, arrived with Lady Bessborough in an open sleigh accompanied by a mounted escort of Princess Louise Dragoon Guards.

As the governor-general stepped to the throne to read his speech, Lady Bessborough took a hand-carved chair nearby which was once the property of Princess Louise.

Meighen Sits By Her.

A messenger was sent to summon members of the Commons. As tradition requires, he called them by rapping sharply on the huge oak doors.

As the governor general began his speech, the members of the lower house grouped behind the brass rail which a commoner must never pass. The address was in French and English, official languages of the dominion.

The governor general declared Canada's economic position was "fundamentally sound." He announced negotiations were under way with the United States for construction of the St. Lawrence waterway.

Economy Is Stressed.

"My minister's determination," he said, "is to maintain a rigid economy consistent with the discharge of those statutory and contractual obligations which are essential to the preservation of the integrity and credit of the dominion."

From the glitter and gold of the Senate, the members of the Commons returned to their own chamber. There a new Labor member was presented, bringing that party's membership to four. The standing in the Senate is Conservatives, 49; Liberals, 47.

Premier Bennett announced the Canadian government had not entered into any correspondence bearing on the merits of the St. Lawrence waterway plan since the last session of Parliament. All negotiations carried on had been verbal, he said.

In answer to questions from Mackenzie King, opposition leader, he said there had been no orders-in-council regarding the project since the last session.

League Eagerly Awaiting Neutral Shanghai Report

Geneva, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—The League of Nations anxiously awaited today for the first report from its neutral commission in Shanghai, which is inquiring into the Sino-Japanese conflict there. The Japanese declaration that Tokyo can not agree to cease all war preparations and can not allow neutrals to participate in the ultimate negotiations with China was accepted in league circles as a continuation of the policy Japan has followed since the special league council sessions last October and November.

Another sitting of the council will be held when the first report of the Shanghai investigators has been received by Sir Eric Drummond, league secretary-general. This report may arrive tomorrow.

Situation in Shanghai 'VerySerious,' Cable Says

New York, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—The situation in Greater Shanghai was described as "very serious" in a cablegram received today by the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society from its office in Shanghai. The message added

HEARINGS IN HOUSE ON NEW TAXES END

Ways and Means Group Will Begin Study of Plans to Balance Budget.

(Associated Press.)

The difficult job of finding $1,000,000,000 annually in additional revenue to bolster Federal finances is the House ways and means committee's pressing business for the next few weeks.

A month of searching at public hearings for fresh and substantial tax sources ended yesterday. Only a few concrete suggestions, however, for the new tax bill were gleaned from the 300-odd witnesses. Most of the tens of thousands of pages of testimony carried objections of industry's representatives and other interests to both administration and Democratic tax proposals.

At an executive session Tuesday the group of fifteen Democrats and ten Republicans will begin considering this voluminous matter along with new Treasury estimates on the prospective return of the administration's $920,000,000 program.

Speaker Garner and Acting Chairman Crisp of the committee have been advised that Undersecretary Mills, who is to be Secretary of the Treasury, now expects the proposals to yield about $300,000,000 less than originally estimated because of the changed business situation.

At the same time, Mills will submit estimates of possible yields from a 1-cent a gallon tax on gasoline, a 2-cent a gallon tax on imported oil, a 5 per cent consumers tax on electric energy and household gas and a manufacturers' sales levy. All these will be given careful consideration.

Crisp, the ranking Democrat, who is taking the place of the ill Chairman Collier, said it would require the remainder of this month to draft the new tax bill.

"The business interests of the country opposing these taxes apparently do not realize that their own prosperity and safety depend upon how soon we balance the National budget," The Georgian said. "It is the most vital issue in this country's economic recovery."

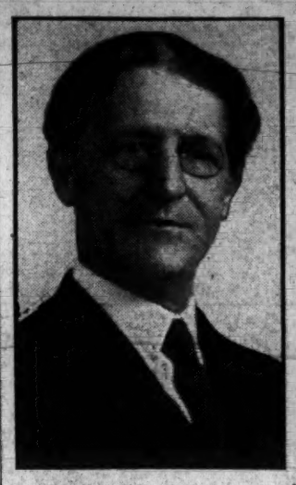
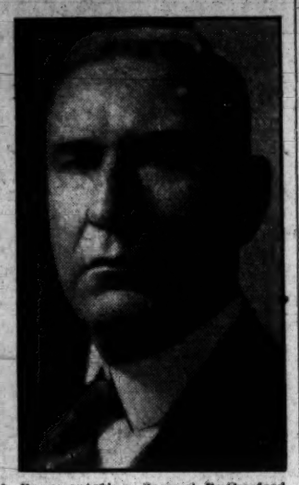
Quin and Rutherford, House Leaders, Die Within Hour





Representatives Samuel Rutherford (left), of Georgia, and Percy Quin, of Mississippi, who died here within less than an hour of each other, the victims of heart attacks.

Death of Mississippian and Georgian Laid to Overwork.

Two veteran representatives, both chairmen of important committees in the House, died yesterday within an hour of each other. Heart ailments were the cause of both deaths and Dr. George W. Calver, House physician, declared that overwork was the basis of both deaths.

Representative Samuel Rutherford (Democrat), of Georgia, was the first heart victim. He fell dead in his rooms at the Hamilton Hotel at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning as he was shaving.

Representative Percy Quin (Democrat), of Mississippi, succumbed at Naval Hospital 50 minutes later.

The two vacancies caused by the deaths cut the Democrats' majority in the House to only four. Congress gained its full membership for the first time this session when Senator Huey Long, of Louisiana, took his seat only a week ago. The House membership now comprises 218 Democrats, 213 Republicans, 1 Farmer-Labor and 3 vacancies. The other vacancy was caused last week by the resignation of Representative Russell Leech (Republican), of Pennsylvania, who was named to the Board of Tax Appeals.

Resolutions of Regret.

Resolutions of regret were adopted by the House, which adjourned ten minutes later out of respect for the two members. The Senate also adjourned as a mark of honor to them.

The death of Representative Rutherford was entirely unexpected. He apparently had been in good health. Hearings before his elections committee on legislation to abolish the short sessions of Congress had just been completed and he conferred with Speaker John N. Garner Wednesday on steps to bring the bill before the House within a week or ten days.

Mrs. Rutherford was alone with him when he collapsed. She immediately called the hotel desk for aid, but her husband died before physicians could reach him.

Mr. Quin, on the other hand, had been confined to his bed for nearly a month. His heart first showed signs of weakening during the last Congress, and at that time Dr. Calver warned him that he "must ease up." However, the Mississippian, a close student of the Muscle Shoals situation, was deeply interested in a bill he was working upon which would permit leasing the power project.

Worked on Shoals Plan.

The Democrats obtained a majority in the House and he accepted the chairmanship of the military affairs committee and started working harder than ever for his legislation.

He collapsed some time ago while the committee was conducting hearings on Muscle Shoals, and had been confined to his bed for nearly a month. His stay at Naval Hospital brought temporary improvement, but his heart failed so rapidly yesterday that his wife did not have time to reach his bedside before death came.

Representative Quin had been a member of the House since 1913. He was the son of a Baptist minister and was born October 30, 1872, in Amite County, Mississippi. He was a graduate of Gillsburg Collegiate Institute and of Mississippi College. After graduating from the latter institution he started teaching school in McComb, Miss., and began the practice of law a year later. He served in the Mississippi State Legislature from 1900 to 1902. He married Miss Aylett Buckner Conner, of Natchez, Miss., October 1, 1913. They made their home in McComb.

Colorful Figure in House.

Representative Quin was known as one of the most colorful members of the House. His appearance on the floor for a speech was often the signal for members to crowd the floor and cheer. He usually began his address by opening his collar, taking off his coat and then driving home his points with characteristic gestures.

In contrast, Representative Rutherford's work in the House was mostly conducted in the background, but his quiet ability was recognized by his colleagues. He took his ideas before them only when he believed he had completed all of the necessary preliminary work.

He was born in Crawford County, Ga., March 15, 1870. He attended Washington and Lee University and was graduated in law from the University of Georgia in 1894. He served as Mayor of Forsyth, Ga., for three years and for a like period was a representative in the Georgia Legislature. He served one term as State senator. He was elected to the House of Representatives from the Sixth Georgia District March 4, 1925. He married Miss Abigail Ponder in 1897.

In the short session of the House the members heard resolutions introduced by Representatives Collins, of Mississippi, and Crisp, of Georgia.

Tribute to Rutherford.

Before adoption of the resolution Representative Crisp said: "There never was a man more devoted to his public duty than Samuel Rutherford. In my opinion, strain and overwork caused his death. The public does not know the amount of effort we are required to put forth. We are inclined to forget it. Let us relax some and not kill ourselves with overwork."

Representative Collins simply announced Representative Quin's death. Not another member of the House save Collins, Crisp and Speaker Garner spoke a word during the ten-minute meeting.

Speaker Garner issued the following statement:

"Both Representatives Quin and Rutherford were chairmen of important committees who had demonstrated great ability in handling measures which involve issues of vital interest to the entire country.

"Representative Quin, who had served in the House for a longer period, was one of the outstanding members, enjoying the confidence of both the Republicans and Democrats. His death is not only a great loss to Congress, his State and district, but to me. He was a loyal and devoted friend.

Loss Is Stressed.

"Only yesterday I discussed with Mr. Rutherford the manner of handling a constitutional amendmen calling for the elimination of the short session of Congress. He had planned to bring the resolution before the House within a week or ten days. He disclosed his ability and fine understanding of constitutional problems.

"His loss is a loss to the Congress, the State of Georgia and the people of his district. In his death I know I have lost a good friend and I feel it keenly."

Funeral Arrangements.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from his home in Forsyth.

Representatives from Mississippi will accompany the body of Representative Quin to his home in McComb this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock. Funeral services will be held at McComb at 10:45 o'clock Sunday morning with interment at Natchez at 3 p. m.

Senators named as a committee to accompany the body are Harrison and Stephens, of Mississippi; Robinson, Arkansas; Reed, Pennsylvania; Broussard and Long, Louisiana; McKellar, Tennessee; Norris, Nebraska; Black, Alabama, and Patterson, of Missouri.

ATTACKS ON LEAGUE FLAYED BY TUMULTY

Peace Ideals of Wilson Are Again Brought to Fore by His Secretary.

(Associated Press.)

A stalwart disciple of Wilsonian Democracy, Joseph P. Tumulty yesterday denounced in vigorous tones those Democratic leaders who "find it expedient by an artful kind of indirection to run away from the peace ideals of Woodrow Wilson."

The former secretary of the war President, who has since become his biographer, said it was a "most inopportune time to throw sticks and stones at the League of Nations."

Recently Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War under President Wilson, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, an Assistant Secretary of the Navy at that time, have presented their views upon the league.

Still voicing a belief in the league, Mr. Baker said he was opposed to making it a political issue this year and said he would not take the United States into it until such a step was favored by an enlightened majority.

Roosevelt Against League.

The New York Governor said he had concluded this country should not enter the league in its present form.

"When the only agency for peace now available is working to prevent a world catastrophe in the Orient," Mr. Tumulty said in a formal statement, "it is a sad commentary upon American politics that some Democratic leaders, lured on by circumstances, find it expedient, by an artful kind of indirection, to run away from the peace ideals of Woodrow Wilson.

"As I consider the matter, I am picturing the plight and distress of these leaders should the League of Nations after all bring peace to the world.

"Should that great thing happen, what a picture these leaders would present, standing in sackcloth and ashes before the shrine of Woodrow Wilson, saying, 'You are again captain of my soul.'

Time Most Inopportune.

"Surely these leaders have chosen a most inopportune time to throw sticks and stones at the League of Nations. While I agree that the League of Nations should not be made an issue in 1932, and that handsome compromises are sometimes necessary to bring great reforms, I am wondering if the time selected for this act of surrender, in giving aid and comfort to the enemies of Woodrow Wilson, does not proclaim the act one of expediency.

"Surely a leadership like this that is afraid to fight, that is afraid to stand firm against the crowd, does not captivate one like myself who had the privilege of being associated with President Woodrow Wilson, who, to use his own words, would rather 'lose in a cause that some day would triumph than triumph in a cause that must inevitably lose.'

"The Democratic leadership of 1932 I beg leave to say, must be made of finer stuff. That leadership must have in it the blend of courage and fortitude, and the vision of a new world.

"Fortunately, the tides of peace running in the hearts of men, women and children throughout the world can not be held in check by leadership like this—so foolish, so inept, so impotent.

Leaders Embarrass Cause.

"Behind the League of Nations lies deeper still the cause of peace, a cause that has been greatly embarrassed by statements that have recently appeared by men high in the councils of the Democratic party.

"How mighty and majestic appears the figure of Woodrow Wilson in the present situation. The leadership of 1930 must not have it in the base metal of expediency, that kind of expediency that has brought the world to its present plight of unhappiness and misery. If we are to be successful in 1932, we must shake off the sterile curse of expediency."

LOAN BODY MAY GET RESERVE BANKS' AID

Linking of Operations of Two Federal Boards Being Considered.

(Associated Press.)

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is studying the possibility of using the Federal reserve set-up as the backbone of its impending credit operations.

Members of a delegation of State officials from Ohio said last night they had been informed that M. J. Fleming, deputy governor of the Federal Reserve Board for that area, would deal with the corporation's problems arising in Ohio.

It was said that the corporation probably would set up branch offices wherever there was a branch bank of the central district banks of each Federal reserve district.

Dawes Defers Action.

Officers and directors of the corporation have spent the past two days studying methods of procedure and protecting their executive and clerical forces.

No definite commitment was given yesterday to the two widely divergent groups from Ohio and North Carolina who presented their credit problems to Charles G. Dawes, president of the corporation.

From Ohio came State officials and bankers to lay before the corporation the banking situation in that State and suggest that some plan be evolved whereby each State would have assigned to it a certain quota of the $2,000,000,000 available.

Petitioners Encouraged.

Senator Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, said Dawes had given them a careful hearing and that the delegation came away "very much encouraged." Theodore H. Tangeman, director of commerce, of Ohio, added that the board of directors of the corporation had not yet had time to perfect its machinery, and he did not expect any definite action for some days.

Others attending the conference from Ohio were William Taylor, chief examiner of Federal Reserve Banks in the Ohio district; R. I. Fulton, superintendent of banks; James A. Devine, secretary of the Ohio Building & Loan League, and John McCoy, president of the People's Savings & Trust Co., of Marietta.

Tangeman said the active banks in Ohio are in better condition than they have been at any time recently.

Martyrdom or Marriage, Merely Matter of Choice

By JOHN J. DALY

CYNICS will naturally look askance at the decision of Devi Das, youngest son of the Mahatma Gandhi, who preferred martyrdom to marriage. Confronted with a choice of imprisonment for civil disobedience or a honeymoon in the upper Rangoon country, on the Road to Mandalay, the young man chose a cell in the jailhouse at Poona.

When the old mahatma himself was going to jail for advocating the civil disobedienncе campaign in India, he said: "It will be a marvelous opportunity for quiet reflection, meditation, spinning and reading."

Like father, like son. The boy probably feels the same way about it. A man may get married almost any time. It is not every day that a man may be a martyr for a cause and, being a martyr, have at his disposal a quiet cell in a quiet country jail, surrounded by peace and quietude, with none of the rigid demands of matrimony, the struggle for existence, the care and upbringing of children, their education, moral training, and all the thousand and one worries that beset parenthood. Wise man who reflects upon this, and then goes to jail instead—so the cynics say.

FORTUNATELY, there are two sides to the question. If all men chose jail to matrimony, what a world it would be!

As statistics prove, the world of men is divided into two classes: Those who go to jail, and those who get married. Some men, of course, would rather be married than in jail. Others, not so particular, would rather be in jail than married. It all depends on the individual, his likes and dislikes—though the cynics say it is fifty-fifty. The cynics would say that. Some men like pigs' knuckles and sauerkraut, even hausenpfeffer, and other dishes along that line, while some prefer a daintier cuisine. Every man to his taste.

From all accounts, the Gandhis—the mahatma and Devi Das—would rather sit at eventide, behind the bars, spinning and reading, than to telling bedtime stories to the little ones. It is the yen for reflection and meditation. There is hardly that opportunity in married life—especially if there are children. Reflection, then, is out of the question. So, too, meditation; which is, perhaps, a good thing.

* * * *

HOWEVER, spinning is always possible in marriage—the spinning of yarns, the unraveling of fairy tales, as men come home from the Bacchanalian and Dionysian feasts, telling their good wives variations of all the old romances as ancient as the Thousand and One Nights.

With reading it may be different. The only reading a married man enjoys, without interruption, is the morning paper on the bus or car going downtown to the day's work.

Ah, the jailhouse! As the cynics see it, the quietude of the cell takes on all the air of sanctity that once surrounded the old monasteries, where monks in ancient times hid themselves from the world, the flesh and the devil. Some men are born to be married, others achieve it, and still others have alimony thrust upon them. It all depends on the women, and the men. Wonder what they are thinking about in the jailhouse at Poona?

JOCKEY CLUB'S SUIT RAPS HURLEY RULING

Asks Court to Enjoin Secretary From Molesting Work on Island.

Charging that it will sustain irreparable loss if the War Department, through its officers, Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War, and Lytle Brown, chief of Engineers, U. S. Army, is not prohibited by court action from interfering with the plans of the Miami Beach Jockey Club in the development of an island in Biscayne Bay, just off the shore from Miami Beach, Fla., the club yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to enjoin the War Secretary and his aid from molesting the work.

It appears from the suit that the Secretary of War first ruled that the development of the island would not interfere with navigation, and then, following a storm of protests, reversed himself. Having once decided the matter, the Secretary is not now in a position to review his own decision, Attorneys Wilton J. Lambert and Rudolph Yeatman claimed.

Furthermore, the jockey club contended, it was on the verge of spending $2,000,000 in conducting the necessary operations in and about the island, and such an expenditure at this time would be an aid in relieving unemployment.

The War Department's second finding asserted that the development of a submerged island, which the jockey club controls, would seriously interfere with navigation. This is disputed in the suit, which says only small pleasure craft and other light-draft boats use the waters about the island. The court was asked to enjoin the War Department so that work on the development can go forward.

Crippled M-2 Crawled 3 Miles Along Sea Floor

Portland, England, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Experts who examined the position of the submarine M-2, which sank in the English Channel January 26 with 61 men aboard, said the crippled submarine had apparently moved for 3 miles along the sea bed before finally coming to its last resting place.

The position of the sunken ship was definitely ascertained last night by the destroyer Torrid with underwater soundings. It was near the spot where a British sea captain said he saw the vessel sink.

MacDonald Improving Following Operation

London, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Premier Ramsay MacDonald had a restless day after an operation on his left eye for glaucoma last night, but his eye was healing normally.

Although he was restricted in his activity at a nursing home he kept in close touch with events in the Far East today, and in the House of Commons. His visitors were limited, however. The prime minister probably will remain in the nursing home for a week or ten days.

DIRECT RELIEF BILL MADE SENATE ORDER

(Associated Press.)

The Senate yesterday squarely faced the troublesome issue of spending Government money to help the jobless and took action preparatory to a direct vote on a proposal that $375,000,000 be appropriated for this purpose.

Without objection, the La Follette-Costigan bill to bring this about was made the order of business. The acquiescence of the administration Republican group was taken as an indication it is confident of defeating the proposal when the final vote arrives. President Hoover is an outspoken opponent of direct Federal relief.

The outlook was dismal for a substitute measure proposed by the Democratic leadership. This would have $750,000,000 appropriated, one-half of the amount for road construction and the other for loans to States to be devoted to relief work.

When the substitute is brought to a roll call the Republican independents of the West, who are backing the La Follette-Costigan measure, will vote with the Republican regulars against it. Several Democrats have bolted the party leadership on this question and may be expected to vote with the Republicans.

Several other alternative or substitute proposals were being discussed informally yesterday, but were not ready for presentation to the Senate. If these are defeated, Senate leaders expect a close vote on the La Follette-Costigan bill. They said this vote probably would not come before tomorrow, however, and might be delayed until next week.

The only speeches on the bill so far have been by its two authors, La Follette (Republican), of Wisconsin, and Costigan (Democrat), of Colorado. The latter yesterday continued without finishing the speech he began Wednesday to convince the Senate that private relief funds are inadequate and must be supplemented from the Federal Treasury.

He spent most of the day reading to the Senate testimony of welfare workers before the manufacturers' committee in support of the bill and the evidence they submitted that existing relief resources are nearing exhaustion.

Two amendments to the Democratic substitute proposal were offered by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, both designed to insure repayment by the States of the loans which would be made under the bill. One would provide that if the States had not repaid the loan within three years, Federal road aid funds would be withheld until settlement of the debt. The other would prevent loans to a State until its legislature had adopted a resolution promising to repay them.

Sponsors of the relief legislation contended the second amendment would prevent making the loans in time to meet the emergency.

The Costigan-La Follette measure was given "full and complete" indorsement yesterday by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor. Attempts to present a substitute measure were termed "mere subterfuge" by William Green, president of the federation, who said "it is not a question now, in midwinter, of loans to States which have no authority to borrow or to try to develop a public works program."

"The council believes that Congress should help quickly," Green said in a statement. "It should help now. It should respond as fully and as promptly to the needs of hungry men, women and children as it responded to the call for help from financial organizations when it passed the two-billion-dollar financial reconstruction bill."

SENATOR DAVID A. REED.

SENATOR DAVID AIKEN REED, of Pennsylvania, is a crack shot, having once been the national rifle champion of America. Nowadays, when he gets the chance, which is infrequent, he goes duck hunting. If he comes back empty handed it is simply because there were no ducks. Certainly it is not because his aim was poor, for, as has been said, his is a deadly aim. And certainly it is not because his shotgun was defective, or because he ran short of ammunition. Reed has a whole room filled with guns and he is much too careful a hunter ever to forget ammunition.

These facts are mentioned simply to draw a parallel. For in many ways David A. Reed, the sportsman, is like David A. Reed, the statesman. He is not a great orator. From the standpoint of the gallery, he could not even be called a good orator. Nevertheless, when it comes to defending or fighting a piece of legislation he is one of the most formidable and most effective men in the Senate.

And the reason is that he always goes into a debate well armed and well supplied with ammunition.

Another reason he is effective is that he relishes a fight. Once embroiled in a parliamentary battle, he sees it through, win or lose.

Nor have Reed's battles been limited to the parliamentary kind. In 1917-18 he was Maj. Reed, of the United States Army. Specifically he was a major in an artillery outfit, and before the big scrap was over he had seen plenty of action.

He came to the Senate in 1922 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of William E. Crow. He was elected to a full term shortly thereafter. He was elected for another six-year term in 1928. Thus he does not come up for reelection again until 1934.

Reed is known as an "administration spokesman." And it is a fact that he is extremely close to President Hoover. The Pennsylvanian has always made it clear, however, that he is not necessarily committed to every recommendation the administration makes.

If he didn't make such a reservation, he wouldn't be true to the traditions of the fighting Reeds of Pennsylvania. One of his ancestors—Squire Reed—once defied the great George Washington himself. But that is another story.

MRS. JUDD'S FIGHTS OVER MEN RELATED

Doctor Testifies Defendant Blamed Tragic Sequel on Halloran.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Quarrels over men and the purported "strange intimacies" between Agnes Anne Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson, trunk murder victims, broke up the friendship between the two young women and Winnie Ruth Judd, who is on trial for the slayings, it was testified today.

Dr. Joseph Catton, San Francisco psychiatrist, related to the jury conversations which he said he had had with the defendant concerning her relations with the victims prior to the killings last October 16. He declared Mrs. Judd to be sane.

Mrs. Judd, the witness said, named Jack Halloran, Phoenix lumber dealer and sportsman, as a man "I love with all my heart and soul more passionately than I ever loved my husband."

Halloran, who volunteered himself as a witness, was sworn at the start of the trial with the rest of the State witnesses, but has not been called.

In a statement made during the investigation of the case when he was identified as a friend of all three women, Halloran said he had been "innocent but perhaps indiscreet."

"Would there have been any Ruth Judd case without Halloran?" Dr. Catton said he asked Mrs. Judd.

"No," he said she answered.

"Could Halloran help you if he wanted to?" He said her answer was, "He certainly could."

"Why don't you tell a complete story?" Dr. Catton said he pressed her.

"Because I can't see it would do me any good, and it would make trouble for others," he said she replied.

Discussions and arguments took place among the girls for some time before the slayings, Dr. Catton said Mrs. Judd told him.

"She stated that as a matter of fact arguments over Jack Halloran and 'a Mr. Dixon,' and arguments of strange intimacies on the part of Anne and Sammy were the cause of the fight and anger shown by all three girls."

Mrs. Judd, who is being tried for the slaying of Mrs. Leroi, also was declared sane by Dr. J. D. Mauldin, Maricopa County physician. Defense witnesses previously had testified they believed Mrs. Judd was insane at the time of the slayings.

Dr. Mauldin said the accused woman told him she could not have dismembered the body of Miss Samuelson. The bodies of the two victims were sent from Phoenix to Los Angeles in trunks.

Illinois Mine Member Is Refused Board Seat

Indianapolis, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Rallying to a claim of "taxation without representation," members of the Illinois delegation to the biennial convention of the United Mine Workers of America made an unsuccessful attempt late today to have Joseph Vincent, of Herrin, Ill., seated as a member of the international executive board, the governing body of the organization.

Vincent was elected by the members of District 12, Illinois, last August, but was not seated because of protests lodged against him by some local unions in Illinois. The committee on appeals and grievances today recommended that the convention leave the matter with the board for settlement. The committee's report was adopted.

P. R. R. SEEKS LOAN FROM FEDERAL FUND

Atterbury Says Cash Will Be Used to Further Construction.

New York, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, disclosed tonight the company would seek a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to carry on its construction program.

Atterbury, citing a "large program" of electrification and terminal improvements now under way, said a "rough guess" as to the amount needed would be about $5,000,000 a month.

The Pennsylvania, which he said represented about one-eighth of the Nation's railroad investment, was described by its president as "greatly impressed" with the necessity of continuing a reasonable program of construction work both to provide employment and to take advantage of prevailing low costs.

The time of making formal application for the loan, Atterbury said, had not been decided upon.

While declining to commit himself on a definite figure with respect to the amount of the loan, he emphasized that every penny of it would be spent on labor and materials. Maturities and other obligations coming due during the year, he said, would be met by other funds.

With the railroad men having agreed to a 10 per cent wage cut, the Railroad Credit Corporation actively at work and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation ready to begin business, Gen. Atterbury expressed the opinion the country was about to become infused with a renewed confidence in the future of its railroads.

ROSE ALLEN DENIES SHE LIED ON STAND

State Loses Battle to Keep From Jury Reference to Relationship.

Norristown, Pa., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—In a crowded courtroom where spectators hung tensely on every word, the Commonwealth lost a furious battle today to keep from the jury reference to the alleged relationship between Rose Allen and Francis A. Donaldson, slain by the girl's brother, Edward.

Equally dramatic in the fourth day of the trial of the young society man for murder was the successful effort by the defense to have admitted a statement by Allen that indicated he killed Donaldson for cause and apparently self-defense.

Most of the fireworks came late in the day after employes of the hotel where the Allens lived and policemen told what they had seen and heard before and after the shooting.

Rose Allen, earlier in the day, again took the witness stand to deny that she had lied in her testimony yesterday and that there was no "hidden hand" in her hiring a lawyer to protect her interests.

Statement Admits Threat.

The statement showed the 23-year-old defendant admitted to the police he had said to his sister Rose that he would "blow Donaldson's head off," as she testified yesterday. But, he told police, he said that to his sister only as a means of scaring her into keeping Donaldson away from the apartment. He told police he "had tried everything else."

His sister, he told police, had removed all the weapons she could find from their apartment, but this was because she feared her father would shoot Donaldson, not that her brother might.

He drove to Rosemonte and obtained the shotgun at the home of a friend only after every effort he could think of had failed to get Donaldson and his friend, Albert Gallatin H. Lucas, out of the apartment, where Donaldson had beaten him while Lucas held his father and urged Donaldson on.

Drove 12 Miles to Get Gun.

Allen's statement said he never thought of the traffic policeman on the corner, but drove 12 miles to Rosemont and back to get the shotgun. "I put two shells in it, but I wasn't thinking," the statement said. "It was second nature to do it. I walked upstairs to the apartment. To tell the God's truth I don't know what I saw. I saw Donaldson standing by the telephone and I just pulled the trigger. Then, after I shot, I walked into the dining room, threw the gun down on the sofa and said to my father, 'Now I've done it, and that's all.' Then the policemen rushed in."

According to the statement, Allen replied to a question that when he put shells in the gun it was not his intention to shoot Donaldson. "I put the shells in the gun from force of habit," it read. "There was no conversation before you fired the shot?"

"No. He turned around and started for me. That is the last I remember. Nothing was said at that time by either one. We were 10 feet apart. Lucas was at the left of Donaldson. I don't remember where I left the guncase. I don't know why I shot this man."

Only to Scare Him.

"Did you shoot this man because he ruined your sister?"

"Yes."

"Wasn't the whole argument over your sister?"

"Yes."

"You meant to shoot him when you went for the gun?"

"No, only to scare him. I put the shells in unconsciously."

"When did you tell your sister you'd shoot him?"

"At noon. I thought I'd have to do something to scare her. Nothing else did any good. My sister and I had an argument at noon over Donaldson. But I didn't order her to leave the apartment."

"This is a true statement?"

"It is God's gospel truth."

The statement ended with that phrase. Capt. Mullin said it was made at midnight, a few hours after the shooting.

The cross-examination was brief. Connor asked, "You asked the whole truth?" and Capt. Mullin replied, "Yes."

"You didn't tell him to make it brief?" and the policeman said, "No."

"That's all," said defense counsel.

Young Allen Shows Interest.

Young Allen during the recital sat leaning forward, hands clasped and intently listening to the proceedings that meant so much to him. There was stillness in the courtroom, broken only by the coughing of Horace Allen, the father.

In the statement leading up to the shooting, Allen said he had been informed of Donaldson's relations with his sister while he was in a hospital at Saratoga, N. Y., and had come home because his father, broken in health by money gone through financial reverses and the death of his mother, could not cope with the situation.

He said Donaldson had admitted to his father that he had wronged Rose. "We didn't want a marriage when he heard that," Allen said in a statement, "but we didn't seem to be able to keep them apart."

Effort to Show Relationship Fails.

An earlier effort to introduce the alleged relationship between Rose Allen and her finance failed when Sergt. E. C. Robb, of the Lower Merion police, was called. He was asked whether he had heard Allen say that Donaldson had wronged his sister, but the district attorney interposed an objection because it was improper examination. There was a long wrangle and the defense withdrew the question and put it in another form.

The sergeant replied that he did not hear Allen say anything about the relations between the two.

NEW BUILDINGS HEAD CHOSEN AT HOWARD

Edward S. Hope to Take Over Handling of University Structures.

The president and trustees of Howard University announced yesterday appointment of Edward S. Hope as superintendent of buildings and grounds. He is a graduate of Morehouse College, Atlanta, and of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and served as acting superintendent of buildings and grounds at Spelman Institute, Atlanta, the educational institution for colored women by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Formerly he was in charge of the water power survey for the Grenfell Mission, St. Anthony, Newfoundland, and he has also served in New York, with the State Department of Public Works, taking over the preparation of construction estimates on Conduit boulevard, Long Island. He went to Brazil for the Electric Bond & Share Co. in 1928, engaged in hydrographic investigation, being in charge of more than 200 stations from Bahia to Rio Grande do Sul.

He will take over the work temporarily held by Albert I. Cassell, university architect, the building program of the university having developed to the place where it will require all of the architect's time. Mr. Hope is the son of John Hope, president of Atlanta University, and the outstanding Negro educator in America.

ELEMENT 85 FORCED INTO DEFINITE FORM

New Discovery in Alabama Described by Scientist in Magazine Article.

Auburn, Ala., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—The newest addition to the list of the elements, number 85, peeped out of hiding today and made its first appearance in concentrated form.

Announcement that element 85 has been concentrated in a chemical compound called "lithium alabamine" is made by Prof. Fred Allison, Edna R. Bishop and Anna L. Sommer, of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, in the February journal of the American Chemical Society, out tomorrow.

New knowledge about element 85, most elusive of the 92 elements or indivisible chemicals out of which all things are made, is expected to result from their work. Element 85 was first reported by Dr. Allison and his coworkers in April, 1931.

Element Hides Bashfully.

Until now element 85 has hidden bashfully from scientists, making its presence known only by its effect on light rays passing through a chemical solution. It is one of the rarest of substances.

Now Dr. Allison and his colleagues have captured it and "boiled it down," so that its properties can be more easily studied. They have christened it tentatively "alabamine" after the State of Alabama.

When Dr. Allison and his coworkers reported discovery of element 85 last spring, they said they had detected the barest traces of it—one part in ten billion—with the magneto-optic method developed by Dr. Allison. They now have concentrated enough of it to make 1-400,000 of a gram of element 85 in combination with lithium. It took 100 pounds of monazite sand to supply this fraction of a gram.

Concentration of element 85, says Dr. Allison, confirms the original discovery of the element with the magneto-optic method, which has been disputed in some scientific circles.

Time Differentiates Elements.

In the magneto-optic method, slight differences in the time in which chemical compounds react to magnetic forces are used to identify different elements. The difference varies for each compound and therefore for each element. These reaction times are very short, often less than a billionth of a second. They are measured by the speed of light or the speed of electricity along wires.

Alabamine is about 221 times as heavy as hydrogen, says Dr. Allison's article, which means its atomic weight is approximately 221. This is very close to the atomic weight predicted for element 85 before it was discovered.

Alabamine is one of the halogens, a group of elements that are "chemical cousins" and bear a family resemblance to each other. It includes chlorine, bromine and iodine. Alabamine forms a series of compounds or chemical combinations similar to its halogen cousins. Study of these compounds by the magneto-optic method has outlined considerable chemical knowledge of alabamine, says Dr. Allison's article.

Reichsbank to Be Given $100,000,000 Renewal

Paris, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—It was announced here today that a credit of $100,000,000 to the German Reichsbank had been renewed for a month's duration.

The credit was offered by the Banks of France and England, the Bank of International Settlements and the Federal Reserve Bank of the United States. A new understanding will be necessary before March 4.

Profit-Sharing and Idle Hours

By H. G. WELLS

A FRENCH profit-sharing system was in operation as early as 1820, and there are a number of such businesses still active. The Paris Bon Marche has a scheme at work dating from 1880 by which all its share capital is now in the hands of past or present employes. Similar schemes have been operated in Great Britain and America following upon French precedents. The employes of the British Gas Light & Coke Co., the largest gas company in the world, have acquired £750,000 of its ordinary stock as their share in its profits. The Zeiss Works in Jena, manufacturing glass lenses, are run on a profit-sharing scheme that has proved a great success.

But such successes are exceptional in the history of profit-sharing. The method has many drawbacks; its outstanding successes are few and generally due to the enthusiasm and integrity of the managing employer; it does not increase and spread through the general body of industry. It fails to excite much enthusiasm in the ordinary worker, who is apt to consider it as a mere complication of his pay, and the trade unions regard it as a method of shelving the proper adjustment of wages. It raises many delicate and debatable questions about what are profits and what are receipts from the consumption of capital, and what proportion of the annual surplus may legitimately go back into the business for depreciation and expansion. It is in fact an encumbering quasi-benevolent device; it leaves the primary functional opposition of employer and employed untouched, and we note it here mainly to distinguish it clearly from the essentially structural innovations, the real resumptions of responsibility and participation by the organized workers, that have sprung from the Guild Socialist conception.

ONE chief hardship of the worker in the modern industrial world is the uncertainty of his employment from day to day and in many cases from hour to hour.

Comfortable, prosperous people know little of the tedium, wretchedness and disappointment that have characterized and still characterize great fields of employment through the "waiting about" forced upon the workers by the chancy, undercalculated and inconsiderate nature of a large proportion of industrial operations. Men have to stand at dock gates, waiters queue up outside restaurants, men and women sit inactive in clothing shops waiting for work to be given out, they assemble in silk-weaving establishments, in steel works, glass works and so on, earning nothing until they are beckoned to their task. Until recently it was not even the custom to pay actors and actresses for rehearsals. Few prosperous people realize that to be an out-of-work is often as binding and far more tedious than to be in employment. They think of being out of work as a leisurely, free state, disagreeable only through its concomitant of want.

* * * *

One might imagine from this that one great objective of trade union effort would be to secure continuity of employment. But that has not been the case. There are alternative evils to be considered. Labor under contract is hampered in the strategy of collective bargaining. And a contract for continuous employment without definite conditions for treatment may became very easily a practical slavery. The ancient English contract with farm servants for a year, the yearly bond of the Northumbrian coal miner, the annual hiring of the Staffordshire potters, have now, for that reason, become matters of history. It is only when the contract is amplified by a very rigorous definition of the rights and remedies of either party, when there is a well-defined schedule of the customs of the trade and the precise duties of the worker, that the latter can feel secure against aggressions and deprivations. We find, therefore, that the worker is forced to choose between two uncertainties; uncertainty of continuous earning on the one hand and uncertainty of treatment on the other. His adjustment between these two sets of considerations is a complex task which is still going on.

* * * *

CONTEMPORARY industrialism has been evolved in relation to a labor class numerically always in excess of the demand for its services. Industry has been wont to take in workers as it needed them, by the hour, day or week, and to drop them again directly they were unwanted. The community had to carry these workers for the primitive type of employer during his intervals of relative inactivity, and he was never called to account for their upkeep. Such education as these workers got was provided either by charitable bodies or the general community, and when they were disabled or superannuated they again went on to public resources. There was little or no recognition of the indebtedness of the employer to this floating population of impoverished people which served to cheapen his labor supply. That did not come into his figuring. The drain they made on the general resources was not charged to him.

* * * *

Education in the early stages of the industrial revolution was trivial, poor relief was a minimum, and it was only as the standard of efficiency and economy rose, as education became public and expensive and assistance for the out-of-work increased, that people began to think of any bookkeeping as between the social cost of the worker's birth, life, and death and the finance of industry. The common man of today has become a much more manufactured and costly product than the common man of a century ago. Then he was, one may say, a wild product, like a chance mushroom in a meadow; the employer picked him and consumed him; now he is a cultivated product, and the organized community which has made him asserts its right to control the exploitation of his abilities.

* * * *

PROF. CARR-SAUNDERS calculates that the cost of producing a boy for the labor market in Britain (1930) is well over £350. The government returns show an educational expenditure of £100; food and clothing amount to at least £200, and rent and social services certainly add another £50 to the total.

The industrialist of the early nineteenth century lived like an animal that ranges in the woodland; he reaped his profit with no thought of whence it came, and with an unshaken confidence in his own right to live. But all that has changed and continues to change. The industrial concern is becoming more and more dependent on public resources for the quality and intermittent support of its labor supply, and the world at large crows impatient with the factory's habit of absorbing and then excreting workers into the general community without the slightest regard for social decency. Sustained unemployment means degeneration, and the right of industry working for private profit to take the young people society has provided, has civilized and, to some extent, educated, use them intermittently for a term of years, and throw them out in a state of diminished usefulness in order to avail itself of younger, fresher and cheaper material, is being questioned more and more acutely.

The possibility of greatly reducing casual and short-term employment can be approached not only from the point of view of the public services, but also from the point of view of the employer. Casual labor is rarely loyal or zealous labor, and a considerable effort is being made by many employers to diminish or eliminate it altogether from their works.

Care Is Ordered Banished In New Orleans for 6 Days

Momus, King of Joy and Lord of Misrule, Issues Proclamation in First of Street Pageants of Annual Mardi Gras Carnival Season.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Banishment of care for six days was proclaimed here tonight as New Orleans, draped in purple, gold and green, hailed Momus in the first glittering street pageant of the annual carnival season.

Momus, king of joy and lord of misrule, brought the official proclamation as he rode through the city at the head of 17 brilliant floats, flanked by flambeaux and manned by the maskers of his organization, depicting "snapshots from Hollywood."

Thousands of winter visitors thronged New Orleans' population of nearly half a million in jamming the curbing along a 10-mile route to salute the merry krewe, which opened the series of traditional street parades with which this old city bids adieu to winter festivals and prepared for the Lenten season to be ushered in next Wednesday.

Tuesday brings the climax, with all-day street masking and the arrival of Rex, ruler of the carnival, who will lead the most elaborate parade of the series at high noon, pausing at the balcony of Boston Club to salute a lucky debutante as the city's queen of 1932.

So again is marked the feast of Mardi Gras, first observed here more than a hundred years ago.

Momus' pageant reviewed more than a dozen Hollywood successes of recent years. Three of Douglas Fairbanks' pictures claimed a major tribute in the moving tableaux. They were "The Thief of Bagdad," "Three Musketeers" and "Robin Hood." The late Lon Chaney's "Phantom of the Opera" and "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," were represented in a brilliant arrangement of gold leaf, lights and maskers. D. W. Griffith's 'Birth of A Nation," and "Broken Blossoms" were included in the list, as were "Monsieur Baucaire," "Showboat," "Rio Rita," and "Ben Hur."

Flying Colonel, as Usual, Is at Office; May Have Had Cake.

New York, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Five years ago a tall young man with light, tousled hair tinkered about an airplane factory in San Diego supervising the construction of a machine in which a few months later he set the imagination of the world aglow. At the time, his name was known to a comparatively few friends and pilots with whom he flashed across the skies carrying United States mail. They called him "Slim."

Charles A. Lindbergh is his name and he observed the day quietly. He went to his office "as usual" and left the world to wonder whether there was a birthday cake on his dinner table tonight at his home in New Jersey. Another Lindbergh, Charles Augustus, jr., now a toddling, chattering youngster of 19 months, was there to greet him at the end of the business day.

QUAKE DEATH TOLL BELIEVED NEAR 100

Relief Agencies Spur Work; Damage of $10,000,000 Estimated in Cuba.

Santiago, Cuba, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Relief agencies intensified their work today to alleviate suffering and repair damage in the earthquake-wrecked City of Santiago.

Luis del Rosal, chief of army forces in Oriente Province, told the Santiago correspondent of the Havana newspaper Informacion he believed the known death toll of nine might be increased to 80 or 100 when all the bodies are found. Four new earthquake shocks last night did little or no damage.

Gov. Jose Barcelo of Oriente Province issued an appeal to the United States for aid to relieve suffering, while Cuban government and United States agencies cooperated. Residents of the city, 75 per cent of whom fled yesterday, appeared to have recovered from their mental shock.

The United States Navy destroyer Williamson brought 2,000 tents here from Guantanamo for shelter. The Cuban government sent $1,000 to provide soup kitchens for feeding 2,000 persons, antitetanic serum to treat 2,000 persons, and other medical supplies sufficient for 1,000 injured.

Additional damage was reported. The Bacardi Co., liquor manufacturers, estimated their loss in the neighborhood of $400,000. The Orphans Home and the Home for the Aged were found to be completely destroyed.

A government commission of engineers, appointed by Secretary of the Interior Onetti, started a sweeping survey of the destruction, estimated in excess of $10,000,000.

United States Ambassador Harry Guggenheim departed for Havana by airplane after conferring with officials and tendering all facilities of his Nation in Cuba. Business was at a standstill, but some houses expected to open tomorrow. Some small stores opened, but the majority remained closed. The normal school was turned over to persons seriously injured and without shelter.

MILLS IS APPOINTED TO MELLON'S POST

"As I left Mr. Harding," Mr. Mellon said, "I told him that I had just one favor to ask—that he would find another for the post. I didn't want to refuse it absolutely."

But President Harding did not heed the request, and the Pittsburgh banker was named. He found his desk piled high with business left over by the outgoing administration. It was two months, Mr. Mellon continued, before he found opportunity to look into the reception room of his suite on the second floor of the Treasury.

Turning to the prohibition question Mr. Mellon said he believed that the Justice Department and not the Treasury should have the administration of the enforcement of that law, and when he hesitated to accept the Secretaryship senators assured him such a transfer would be made.

"One of them told me," the Secretary said with a chuckle, "that the transfer would be made in 60 days." It was little more than nine years before it was done.

Month Before He Sails.

The Secretary said he expected it would be nearly a month before he could sail for his new post. He said personal affairs required his attention, and that he might take a week's vacation in the South. He added he expected to maintain his Washington apartment as a place to stop on his visits to this country.

To Patman's interpretation of Mr. Mellon's appointment came a reply last night from Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts.

"It is an insinuation that no House member ought to make against an official who has served his country as Secretary Mellon has, * * *" Mr. Treadway said. "To have a member of Congress use his position to bring unjustifiable impeachment charges against a man of Mr. Mellon's high type is a charge, not against Mr. Mellon, but against the man who brought them. It shows that he has no sense of the proprieties in that he uses this method to obtain personal publicity."

Appointment Called Pardon.

"Of course," Mr. Patman said, "the impeachment charges now become an academic question. His appointment is equal to a presidential pardon while the jury still has the case under consideration and before a verdict is returned.

"This action practically dismisses the jury. You can not impeach him if he leaves the office, but while he continues as Secretary I intend to push my charges."

Meanwhile, the House judiciary committee considering the Patman charges met in closed session. Chairman Sumners declined to say what course the committee may follow. He added: "I have always regarded impeachment proceedings in their major aspects as equivalent to an ouster suit."

Mr. Patman said yesterday he possessed additional evidence against Mr. Mellon. He made public the following telegram he said was from the American Legion post at Mineola, Tex.:

"We wish to congratulate you on securing the resignation of Mr. Mellon and getting him out of the country, but do not think you have gone far enough yet. England is too close. Get him sent to China."

Mills in Good Humor.

Mr. Mills was smiling and in high good humor as he left the White House. Newspapermen, with whom he has been in frequent contact recently, circled around him to offer congratulations upon his accession to the Treasury Secretaryship.

Mr. Mills was noncommittal, however, as to when there would be a legal change in his position. Asked when he would assume his new duties, he smiled and said: "Frankly, I don't know."

He replied jokingly to a query as to when Mr. Mellon formally would submit his resignation, saying:

"I suppose he will take the reasonable precaution to wait until he is confirmed as ambassador by the Senate."

Mr. Ballantine resumed his connection with the Treasury about a year ago, returning as Assistant Secretary from a law practice in New York. Previously he had been connected with the Internal Revenue Bureau.

NEW RECORD FOR PRODUCTION SET BY U. S. PRINTING OFFICE

GEORGE H. CARTER.

incoming millions of newer publications."

He complained that the inexorable pamphlet urge already is "overflowing the 100,000 square feet of storage space in the Government Printing Office."

Out of a total stock of 101,924,331 pamphlets available at the Office of the Superintendent of Documents during the 1931 fiscal year, only 8,607,247 were sold.

"During the last ten years 10,503,405 copies of publications ordered by the various departments and establishments for official use or free distribution have failed of that purpose and have been sold as waste paper," Mr. Carter's report continued. "In the same period, 7,470,935 copies of publications available for sale by the superintendent of documents have likewise become obsolete and otherwise unsalable.

"These useless publications, mostly pamphlets, added to the 5,925,499 returned by depository libraries, make the total waste of publications recorded by the Government Printing Office during the last ten years amount to 23,899,839 copies, the printing and handling of which cost the Government much more than a million dollars."

Viewed merely as a production plant, the Government Printing Office is a model of efficiency. Engineering groups from all parts of the country inspect it regularly for new ideas on production processes, and foreign industrial missions to America invariably call to view the gigantic 24-hour industrial wonder house.

But the controlling authority of the public printer ends with matters of technical administration. He has absolutely no authority as to when an order shall be executed, how many copies of this or that shall be printed.

He is the servant of every branch of the Government and his official duty is to execute the printing orders delivered to him by any of the 134 various bureaus, offices and divisions which have printing to be done. He is required, moreover, to comply with every whim and fancy of any of the 435 members of the House of Representatives and 96 senators, most of whom always are in a great rush.

Extravagant Basis.

No other production establishment in the world, perhaps, is operated with less coordination between running capacity and demand, and so far as available industrial records go, no other printing establishment in the United States operates on a more extravagant basis.

Demands on the Printing Office have been expanding gradually since 1920, but during the last two years the rate of expansion has been more alarming to Mr. Carter.

Publications printed for all branches of the Government during the 1931 fiscal year—if you can grasp such a figure—numbered 88,524,736, an increase of 426,497 over 1930.

During the entire fiscal year 1931, which ended last June 30, the total increase in press impressions was approximately 2,237,000 over 1930. But during the first six months of the 1932 fiscal year—that is since July 1, 1931—press impressions have been 10,228,000 more than during the corresponding period of the previous year.

Other Increases.

Out of a total budget of $15,520,000 last year, the Printing Office charged $2,500,000 to Congress, its best "customer." In addition to 36,000 copies of the Congressional Record daily during the sessions, Congress called for 6,000,000 copies of bills, reports, hearings and other legislative documents, an increase of more than a million copies over the previous fiscal year.

During the year there were printed "for congressional distribution" some 12,246,218 copies of farmers' bulletins, at a cost of $164,000. A total of 25,360,900 franked envelopes were printed for members of the House and Senate, an average of more than 50,000 for each member, and an increase of 426,497 over the previous year. These envelopes, without letterheads or bulletins, cost $58,767, and the Postoffice Department then rendered $500,000 worth of free distribution service—the amount of postage which would have been collected on the congressional mail at prevailing rates.

There are 636 paid subscribers to the Congressional Record, which despite almost universal public neglect, is steadily growing more voluminous. During the last session of the Seventy-first Congress, the Record averaged 108 pages daily, against a previous average bulk of 83 pages. During the last six business days of December, 1931, the Record averaged 188 pages.

In 1931, members of Congress called on the Printing Office for 14,683,000 reprints of their own speeches, for which they paid $61,247 out of printing and stationery allowances.

Nonproductive Wages.

The total outlay for labor during the last fiscal year was $9,582,000, of which approximately $2,000,000 was charged to nonproductive wages; that is, wages paid for sick leave, vacations and half-holidays provided by various acts of Congress. Mr. Carter points out that these nonproductive wages aggregate 13 per cent of the total annual charge for printing and binding.

"First rank as a publisher is an easy honor of the Department of Agriculture, whose publications are about treble the number issued by any other department or establishment of the Government," Mr. Carter reported.

But out of the 29,866,506 publications printed for the department last year about 12,225,000 were Farmers' Bulletin, four-fifths of which are allotted by law to members of Congress for free distribution. Agricultural publications printed in 1931 were almost 7,000,000 under the previous year.

The Agricultural Year Book for 1931, a volume of some 1,200 pages, cost $273,320 for 400,000 copies. To date a total of 756 copies have been sold by the superintendent of public documents, and 380,138 copies have been distributed free by members of Congress.

Four publications of the children's bureau, entitled "Prenatal Care," "Infant Care," "Child Care" and "Child Management," have been distributed to the extent of 12,826,193 copies since 1913, of which 2,616,345 were purchased by the public.

TOLL OF OIL VESSEL BLAST IS PUT AT 17

Four Injured and One Missing After Ship Is Destroyed in Pennsylvania.

Marcus Hook, Pa., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Lives of at least seventeen men were snuffed out in fiery blasts which wrecked the motorship Bidwell early today as she lay at a Delaware River pier here.

Four explosions which burned and tore the foreward part of the ship awakened the countryside for a mile around and caused damage to nearby buildings. Four persons injured and one missing completed their toll.

Some seamen asleep on the vessel and members of a yard gang engaged in cleaning the holds were trapped by the flames and the force of the blasts which bent and twisted steel parts about them. Others were blown from the decks into the river or jumped overboard to escape the great fingers of flame.

Captain Killed; Wife Saved.

The body of Capt. Joseph Rivers, of Hollis, N. Y., was found in his cabin when the flames died down sufficiently to let searching parties go aboard. He was believed to have perished while attempting to save his logbook and papers.

His wife, Mrs. Viola Rivers, was blown off the ship, but was saved in one of the most heroic rescues of several that were effected in a short time after the first explosion. She is one of the most seriously injured, however. The missing man, A. B. Selch, of Houston, Tex., is believed to have drowned when he was hurled or leaped overboard to escape.

The dead, charred and mutilated so badly that identification was difficult, were found in the wreckage of the upper deck and in charred holds. Officials of the Sun Oil Co., owners of the Bidwell, assisted by Coroner Herbert Scheehle, of Delaware County, were unable to determine immediately the cause of the explosions.

List of Victims.

The dead are: Capt. Joseph R. River, 33, Hollis, N. Y.; Edward Gielow, 32, seaman, Michigan City, Ind.; Edward Russel, 35, seaman, New York; Leroy Hamilton, 21, seaman, Marietta, Ga.; Stephen Marke, 31, Philadelphia; Robert A. Nelson, 29, Linwood, Pa.; Marion Saraga, 36, Linwood; Steve Gardner, 42, Chester; John Testich, 44, Linwood; T. R. Dreshauer, 27, Baltimore, quartermaster; W. L. Oliver, 32, Charlotte, N. C., quartermaster; Carle Milde, of Hamburg, Germany, boatswain; Grant Pierce, 34, Elmira, N. Y., quartermaster; Edward Anderson, 49, Plainfield, N. J.; A. A. McNab, 55, New York, chief mate; H. H. Derndston, 26, Willmette, Ill.; Harry T. Ackerman, 33, New York, second mate.

The injured, in addition to Mrs. Rivers, are William Major, 37, of Chester; Olaf Rassmussen, 32, of Forest City, Iowa, and Lee R. McMahan, 27, Fostoria, Tex.

The first blast apparently occurred slightly forward of amidships. Acts of heroism went practically unnoticed as seamen labored frantically to save the injured and prevent the ship from sinking. They scarcely had time to get the work under way before the second explosion occurred in about ten minutes. Two other blasts followed in rapid succession.

ALL-NIGHT LIGHTING SERVICE IS OFFERED

Council in Hyattsville Will Consider Power Company Proposal Monday.

For an increase of $2.95 per year per light, the Potomac Electric Power Co. has offered to give Hyattsville, Md., all-night service on street lights. The town council will act on the offer at its regular meeting Monday night.

The present yearly cost of a 60-watt light is $13.70, but these lights are extinguished at 2 o'clock in the morning. For $16.65 a complete service is offered, and street lights will be turned on during a day when cloudy weather makes it necessary. These lights, according to Caesar L. Aiello, town attorney, who negotiated the offer, are the lowest which may be charged under the existing schedule of rates. It is the same price charged to Washington and other large towns nearby for the same service.

The town has about 300 60-watt lights, 7 100-watt, and about 40 250-watt. The larger lights are used to illuminate the Baltimore boulevard and other wide streets in the town. Yearly prices for the stronger lights are slightly more expensive, but will be figured on the same scale, Mr. Aiello said.

Efforts to obtain all-night lighting in the town followed similar efforts by Riverdale, which is also using the service as a crime preventive.

TWO STUDENTS DIE IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Crash Into Milk Wagon Fatal to Prince Georges Girl; Car Crushes Youth.

Two students living in Prince Georges County, one a 16-year-old girl attending the University of Maryland, and the other a divinity student at St. Charles College, in Baltimore, were killed yesterday in two separate auto crashes near Washington.

The girl is Miss Estelle Wilmeth, of Cottage City, Md., who was killed in a collision between a machine in which she was riding, and a milk truck at University lane and Riggs road, near the Montgomery County line. The other victim is James E. McConkey, 21 years old, of Oxon Hill, who was killed when his car ran off the Livingston road at Nichols avenue.

Miss Wilmeth was riding in an auto said to have been driven by Robert Thomas, 18, of Chevy Chase, Md., who received minor cuts and bruises. The driver of the truck, John E. Potter, of 1728 Thirty-third street northwest, also received slight injuries, and both men were treated at the infirmary at Maryland University.

Wet Roads Blamed.

According to Potter, the accident which cost the girl's life was caused by wet roads. Both vehicles were traveling slowly as they approached the intersection, and both applied their brakes. Tires slid on the wet road, however, and the machines glided into one another. Miss Wilmeth was crushed under the milk truck, which overturned after the crash. She was taken to the Washington Sanitorium, but was pronounced dead on arrival.

McConkey was alone in his machine at the time of the crash and the cause of it is not known. Private J. E. Ball, of No. 11 Precinct, saw the lights of the car shining in a gully beside the road and investigated.

McConkey's body was pinned under the car at the bottom of a 10-foot embankment. He was en route to the Farmers' Market at Twelfth and Water streets southwest, to help his father, who is a trucker.

Daughter of U. S. Employe.

Miss Wilmeth was the only child of Warner L. Wilmeth, of Cottage City. She was a freshman at the university, having graduated from Hyattsville High School last year. Her father is an employe of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. She is also survived by her mother, Mrs. Bertha Wilmeth.

McConkey was studying for the priesthood and was at home on a three-week vacation. He was a graduate of St. Theresa's Parochial School, in Anacostia, and Gonzaga College, in Washington. He is survived by his parents, a brother, Warren, and two sisters, Mrs. P. H. O'Donnell and Miss Margaret McConkey.

HOARDING MUST STOP.

President Hoover has put the issue of economic recovery up to the people. His call for a united campaign against hoarding ought to resound throughout the land. The public must be made to realize that the return of normal times is impossible so long as it allows panic to govern its conduct. President Hoover, with the support of Congress, has taken the lead in the reconstruction movement. But nothing can be accomplished unless the people themselves cooperate.

Hoarding on a large scale continues, in spite of the fact that the Government has taken steps to buttress the banking system and to mobilize credit facilities. It is impossible for the Government to make any headway in this program of rehabilitation if the people continue to take their money out of circulation. The President's statement that every dollar hoarded means the destruction of from $5 to $10 in credit should make a powerful appeal to the people. Money must be put back into the arteries of commerce and industry. Otherwise, the credit which was intended to percolate through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation into constructive enterprise will be absorbed in the form of hoarded dollars.

Citizens ought to realize that when they withdraw their money from banks and liquidate their investments they are pulling down the pillars of the American financial and industrial structure. They are bringing depression and its accompanying distress upon themselves, and delaying the time when normal economic activity can be resumed. Critical times like the present demand more and not less cooperation. Unless citizens as individuals are willing to stand together and face this depression all the help that the Government can give will be futile.

The little town of Pleasant Grove, Utah, has set an example that is worthy of emulation in every American community. The town bank was threatened with insolvency because of the heavy demands upon it at a time when the bank was unable to liquefy its assets. Realizing that failure of the bank would be a blow to the community, the citizens assembled in a town meeting and mutually agreed that they would not withdraw their funds. After that simple decision the crisis passed and the bank continued to function normally.

Hundreds of communities are in a similar predicament. For the most part their banks are perfectly sound, but they can not continue to function if deposits are withdrawn for hoarding. When the American people as a whole decide to play the game fairly, to cast their lot with the community interest in adversity as well as in prosperity, much of the imaginary depression that hovers over the United States will be lifted.

President Hoover will organize the heads of civic, labor, commercial, religious, educational and patriotic groups for a concerted drive against hoarding. The people must be made to realize that they can not escape calamity if they allow the financial and industrial institutions of the United States to fail. Community interest must be engendered in every home. Two years ago President Hoover obtained the cooperation of industrial leaders in a Nation-wide endeavor to check the forces of depression. Now he seeks to enlist 122,000,000 Americans in a united assault against the delusion that safety lies in hoarding money. The response of the people to this appeal will determine, in large measure, the future trend toward recovery or further depression.

CYRANO DE BERGERAC.

Lovers of romance and heroism are delighted to have the opportunity to commune with the unconquerable spirit of Cyrano de Bergerac as interpreted by the genius of Walter Hampden. It was a happy thought on Mr. Hampden's part when he decided to tour the country in this immortal play, in which wit, humor and chivalry triumph over all adversities. The country at this time needs an injection of the spirit of the indomitable Cyrano. No one now living is as competent as Walter Hampden to convey to his countrymen the inspiring lesson embodied in the magical lines of Rostand.

Hampden's version of Cyrano de Bergerac is the work of Brian Hooker. It is a superb translation, affording to the English-speaking world the delight with which the great original was hailed as a masterpiece of French literature. The play has been presented nearly 600 times in New York and its vicinity. With its wealth of scenic accessories and with its fortunately chosen cast it will now be presented from Washington to San Francisco. The premiere presentation at the National Theater next Monday evening will be a gala event, well worthy of the finest traditions of the stage.

OGDEN L. MILLS.

Ogden L. Mills has well earned promotion to the great office of Secretary of the Treasury. No officer of the Government has worked more faithfully or more efficiently than Mr. Mills during his service as Undersecretary. His grasp of the Government's fiscal affairs could only be the result of intense application. He is acknowledged to be master of that complicated subject, and in the work he has performed under Secretary Mellon's direction he has won the confidence of the President and the public.

The new Secretary of the Treasury is physically fit to perform the arduous labors which fall to that office, and which Secretary Mellon has performed with such astonishing vitality and vigor. Mr. Mills has before him the opportunity to win enduring renown in administering the affairs of a financial institution that has no parallel for magnitude and importance. He is a suitable counselor of President Hoover. He deserves the honor of prompt confirmation by the Senate.

ELECTRICITY—A NECESSITY.

Over 90 per cent of the urban homes in the United States, more than 20,000,000 of them, are lighted by electricity. This is the age of power and this country, preeminently, is the nation of electricity. The use of that mysterious current for many purposes has long since ceased to be considered a luxury. The same slender wire brings heat and cold, light and power, cool breezes and entertainment. It cleans the house and carries the voice of a friend from a distant State as quickly and as truly as from the next block. From the simpler breakfast aids of coffee pot and toaster, electricity has become the efficient servitor that winds the clock, preserves the food and washes the clothes.

Diversity in household uses for electric current, as well as in the heavier duties as power, is responsible for the remarkable showing that the utility companies have made during the depression years. With steel production off 40 per cent, automobile output reduced nearly 30 per cent and many industries seriously affected, the output of electrical energy for 1931 shows a decline of only 4 per cent. No other industry was able to make such a showing. The consumption of electricity last year equaled the records of 1929 and 1930, while gross revenue increased and 100,000 new customers were added during the year.

Notwithstanding all the manifold uses to which electricity is put these days, its cost remains one of the minor items of household expense. It has become such a necessity that curtailment is made in almost every other direction before thought is given to reducing the magic aid of the current. The average cost of electricity for all uses for an American family is less than 10 cents a day. This reasonable charge explains why the business is constantly expanding.

GREAT BRITAIN'S TARIFF.

Just as the British consul general in New York was predicting lower tariffs in Great Britain, Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, announced in London the final abandonment of free trade. Parliament will levy a duty of 10 per cent on all imports into Britain, except a few foodstuffs, such as wheat, tea and meat, and a few raw materials, such as cotton and wool. After resisting a general tariff for 100 years, Britain has definitely turned her back upon the policy of free trade.

This event is highly significant for two reasons. First, it indicates that England has not reaped the benefits that were expected from suspension of the gold standard. British industry experienced a temporary spurt after the pound depreciated, but conditions are adjusting themselves to the new value of the pound. The advantage of manufacturing on the basis of depreciated currency and selling to countries still on the gold standard are offset by the disadvantages of conducting international commerce with unstable money. The coalition cabinet finds it necessary to impose a sweeping tariff on top of the depreciated pound to protect British industry and labor.

In the second place, the new tariff suggests the terrific pressure upon the world market. In spite of Britain's emergency tariffs and depreciated pound, her adverse balance of trade has been mounting at the rate of about $7,000,000 per week. Commodities and manufactured goods are cheap the world over. Vast supplies are poured upon the most available world market. British industry and labor have been overwhelmed. Despite the fact that Great Britain is a commercial country which lives by international trade, the government has come to the conclusion that it must transfer to its own factories and fields work that is now done elsewhere, thereby decreasing unemployment in the only way possible.

Britain is the last commercial nation of the world to adopt this policy. In the last year and a half most of the European countries have boosted their tariffs a number of times. Every nation is seeking frantically to protect its own producers. Any nation which fails to take such steps runs the risk of having its industries ruined and its people left without jobs.

The United States has not joined in the tariff-raising orgy. Since the Smoot-Hawley act, extending protection to agriculture, was enacted more than a year and a half ago, only minor changes have been made under the flexible provision. But even the Democratic foes of protection have forsaken the fight against the rates in the existing law, not daring to expose American enterprise to the ravages of international competition during such a period. Never has the American protective policy been so vital as now.

AMERICAN BOOK READERS.

Last year the Authors' League Fund spent $18,000 to aid writers in want. This year, according to the president of the league, the demands will be greater and contributions are falling off. Many of the cheaper magazines upon which the younger writers depended have gone out of existence, while many of the high-grade magazines are relying on their regular staff instead of buying from contributors. The small amount of material that is being bought is paid for at about half of former rates.

The publishers' point of view was recently voiced by Robert Lynd when he stated that the hurdles that had to be taken by the publishing industry today were the lack of space for books in the smaller homes of today, the diminishing role of the home as a social center, the competition of the radio, motion pictures and automobile, as well as the frequent shifting of places of residence and the consequent break-up of libraries, resulting in loss of literary interest. Mr. Lynd paints a sorry picture of Americans as a people who are gradually ceasing to be book readers.

It is obvious that the many diversions listed by Mr. Lynd are in direct competition with books, yet he does not mention that today there are more books read in America than at any previous time, and that more books are bought per capita than at any previous period in the history of the United States. The past year has seen a decline in the publishing business, but this falling off has not been disproportionate to the slump in the automobile and motion picture industries. The hardships of both authors and publishers can not be accounted for by a lack of taste on the part of the public. There is a trend toward both better and worse books, with a greater proportion of the population reading books on scientific and cultural subjects.

ROOSEVELT AND THE LEAGUE.

Franklin D. Roosevelt met the League of Nations issue in a spirit quite different from that manifested by Newton D. Baker. In 1920 both were ardent advocates of participation by the United States in the league. Mr. Baker still believes in the league ideal. Gov. Roosevelt virtually admits that his ardor for the league twelve years ago was mistaken zeal. As a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, he repudiates the position he took as the party's vice presidential candidate in 1920.

The effect of Gov. Roosevelt's statement upon his candidacy is not yet clear. He has done well to meet the issue in a straightforward manner early in his campaign, but the effect of his change of heart may injure his cause. Gov. Roosevelt says the League of Nations today is not the league conceived by Woodrow Wilson. In all fairness he should have added that the league as it existed in 1920, when Gov. Roosevelt fought for it, was not the league conceived by Woodrow Wilson. The league has turned out to be just what its opponents in this country have considered it from the beginning—a European political agency.

If Gov. Roosevelt tries to harmonize his present position with the stand he took in 1920 he will run into endless difficulty. He contends now that the United States should have no part in Europe's national difficulties, and calls for the settlement of international disputes in accordance with "fundamental American ideals." The United States could not possibly have followed such a course if Cox and Roosevelt had been elected in 1920 and had taken this country into the league.

Another difficult question faces Gov. Roosevelt in the international field. Does he favor the so-called World Court? If he still retains a flair for internationalism it may militate against him, and, on the other hand, if he departs too far from his former beliefs he may be accused of opportunism.

It is difficult to harmonize Gov. Roosevelt's demand for settlement of international difficulties in accordance with "American ideals" and his advocacy of an international tariff conference. What would be gained if the United States should keep aloof from the European political imbroglio, and then invite foreign governments to assist in revising the American tariff? Gov. Roosevelt should beware lest he place himself in the awkward position of facing both ways.

From the Topeka Capital.

Iowa's State librarian prints a review of the campaign of 1864 and compares it with that of 1932. The two have a greater resemblance probably than any other two presidential contests.

Lincoln reached the lowest stage of his political fortunes in the middle of 1864. For months party leaders had despaired of his reelection, going to the lengths of sending delegations of important men to advise his withdrawal, permitting the party to nominate a more available candidate. Gen. Fremont, the first nominee of the Republican party for President, fell for the clamor and announced his candidacy. He withdrew, however, before the convention.

Efforts to get rid of Lincoln were abandoned, and party leaders resigned themselves to the inevitable. He was nominated at Baltimore without serious opposition.

But the anti-Lincoln sentiment seemed to grow instead of subsiding. In August it seemed all up with Lincoln. In September, less than two months before the election, a New York circular was issued raising the question of the feasibility of making another nomination anyhow. About that time Lincoln himself, convinced that he would be beaten, dictated a letter to be handed to his successor, Gen. McClellan, pledging his full support of the McClellan administration.

In point of fact there never was any McClellan administration. In the election in November Lincoln and Johnson carried every State except Delaware, Kentucky and New Jersey, with 212 electoral votes against 21 for McClellan.

In his brochure on the parallels between the 1864 and 1932 campaigns the Iowa historian remarks: "In the present instance the tide is turning in favor of President Hoover at least eight months earlier than the turn of the tide in Lincoln's favor." Lincoln may have been pulled out of a very deep hole by Union victories, but there never has been any certainty that this was the fact. Anyhow, the gloom in his camp continued after the victories. It is possible the people intended to reelect him all along. In the case of Hoover some victories between now and next fall may play a part in boosting his candidacy, these victories of an economic order, or he may gain ground steadily as the voters conclude that he has handled his difficult problems as well as could have been done by anybody nominated against him.

Remove the Appendix.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

While casting desperately about for means and methods of curtailing useless Government expenditure why doesn't Congress, for example, begin with the Congressional Record and its appendix—particularly the appendix?

It is estimated that Congress pays $840 a day for "embalmed" talk. Senator Reed Smoot recently has urged legislative operation for the removal of the appendix to the Record.

An Echo May Please Your Vanity, But It Can't Teach You Anything.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THIS is a fable in which you have been or may be one of the characters.

In a certain land there lived a reporter whose business it was to provide information for those who had more important work to do.

The people thought well of him and believed everything he said, for he was careful never to tell them anything unless he was quite sure they already knew it.

In the midst of the land there was a city and in the midst of the city an open square and in the midst of the square a great pyramid of stone topped by the figure of a man.

That is, the figure appeared to be that of a man; but to the people it was a god, and they regarded it as the source of all good fortune. They said the god had always been there.

"What is it made of?" asked the reporter.

"It is blasphemy to ask such questions," the people answered. "You had better keep such impious speculations to yourself and attend to your job of supplying us with information."

The reporter, however, felt a great urge to serve. He longed to do something worth while. And one night when the moon was dark he climbed to the top of the pyramid to investigate.

He made a most astounding discovery. The figure wasn't a god at all, but merely a stuffed shirt filled with bologna and banana oil.

He brought back a sample of the filling, and next day he told the people the truth.

Of course you know what happened. The people were filled with rage. They couldn't admit the truth without confessing their past error, and that was more than human vanity could endure.

They hanged the reporter to a telephone pole. As the noose was being adjusted, he said to himself: "Serves me right. I got by beautifully so long as I made no effort to tell them anything, and I deserve hanging for taking such a crazy risk."

Perhaps you think it didn't happen.

But are you quite sure you never helped at such a hanging? Don't you think well of a prophet who tells you things you already know, which is no service at all, and pant for his hide the moment he tells you something new, which is a real service?

Only the few who thirst for truth realize that nothing can be learned from the criticism of a yes-man.

Democratic Night.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

While several Republicans attended the dinner given by President and Mrs. Hoover in honor of Speaker and Mrs. John N. Garner, the list of "opposition" guests was long enough to classify it as "Democratic night" at the White House. Besides the Speaker and Mr. Melvin A. Traylor, both of whom have been mentioned as possible Democratic presidential nominees, the prominent Democrats present included Messrs. Harvey C. Couch, Jesse H. Jones, Breckenridge Long, Samuel Seabury, Joseph P. Tumulty, James W. Gerard, Vance McCormick and Henry T. Rainey.

This was one of the few times a President of one party has ever entertained in honor of a Speaker of another political faith. But it was no more unusual than the Washington "love feast" which has already broken the records for a presidential campaign year.

Always the Hardest.

Topeka Capital.

If the statement has been made once, it has a thousand times, that Mr. Hoover has the hardest job of any President since Lincoln. Probably he has. The same thing, of course, was said of Wilson. But we confess to getting a little tired of having it rung on every President who comes along that he either has the "hardest job" or else he is the most abused and traduced since the office was created.

Must Business Groan Again?

Kansas City Times.

A Democratic tariff bill now before the House ways and means committee would require the Tariff Commission to make its recommendations for changes in tariff duties to Congress instead of to the President as required by the present law.

That change would, of course, destroy the whole purpose for which the Tariff Commission was created. That purpose was to facilitate changes in the duties, when shown to be necessary, without recourse to legislation. The process is simple and direct. If the commission finds upon investigation that a specific duty is too high or too low in view of any economic condition arising since the duty was imposed by Congress, it reports its finding to the President, who is empowered by the law to make the required change by executive order.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Slander and Libel the Regular Portion of Presidents—Gross Attacks in Print.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Bearing upon the subject of "smearing the President," may I give an illustration from life which probably has never been published.

When I was a youngster I met two solemn-looking clergymen from New England, one of whom I knew, as they were passing within a few blocks of the White House. Mr. Cleveland was then near to the close of his second term. These two heralds of the gospel expressed grave concern for the safety of the country under such a Chief Magistrate as we then had. I looked rather than spoke my surprise. "Is it not well established," one of them said, "that Mr. Cleveland kicked his wife downstairs about a week ago?" In astonishment, I replied: "Do you really believe such a thing occurred?" The spokesman of the two gave his answer: "I have not the slightest doubt that the report is correct."

A well-known political writer has recently recalled to the attention of American readers the gruesome details of various slanders which our Presidents have had to deal with, particularly of late years. May I add this testimony: I was induced to read the one which is considered the most virulent of attacks on our present Chief Magistrate. The malice of the writer, added to his flippant language and spirit, and his evident attempt to make vague generalities bear personally upon Mr. Hoover, caused me to throw down the book in disgust. What of men and women who by newspapers and books strike at character of persons in high places by such means as are now in vogue? Has freedom of the press brought us to such a pass as this? Let decent newspapers all over the country denounce such tactics in unmistakable words. J. O. KNOTT.

Big Oil Companies Responsible for Too Many Filling Stations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on "Too Many Filling Stations" is very timely, but the principal cause of the increased cost of distribution was not given, except by inference.

Some oil companies through their 100 per cent stations try to choke out the little fellow by refusing to install pumps in mixed stations selling other than their own products. They install pumps, tanks, lifts and other equipment free in corner grocery stores where the owner is incompetent to properly run a service station. Their aim is to keep out competition, and through their pumps to secure greater advertisement. The owner has practically no investment except the land in these stations and thus little to lose. The companies should be compelled to treat all station owners alike, and also to install pumps in independent or mixed stations. The independent owner makes a far better manager than any paid manager and serves his patrons better.

The tank wagon on the street reduces the output from legitimate stations, and the public has no protection from unscrupulous dealers who sell third grade gasoline. After the light grade straight gasoline is taken off from the petroleum there is left between that and kerosene a low grade gasoline called third-grade gas. This gas will choke up a high compression motor with carbon. The major companies are responsible for the present condition of the retail trade. H. D. WOODSON.

MAKING HISTORY.

Some day in happier years to be
The troubles we are going through
Will be set down in history
For high school students to review,
And, unconcerned, some boy will tell,
"That was the time when prices fell."

And there will grow a writer wise
In future years, beyond a doubt,
Our foolishness to criticize,
And point our every blunder out.
"'Tis hard to guess," he'll say, "what men Could have been thinking of back then."

Some sage will pen a chapter long
On human folly, such as ours,
To prove our sanest judgment wrong
And show his own superior powers.
"Fancying their golden days would last,"
He'll say: "They tried to go too fast."

And yet as they shall march along
They, too, may find it hard to know
Just what is right and what is wrong,
And what is high and what is low.
Who dreamed, before the market break,
The difference two years could make?

DUPLICATE IN WINNIPEG.

DUPLICATE Contract Bridge is gaining new followers almost every day. My mail brings to me daily interesting questions in bidding and play arising at the Duplicate table. Of course, the same questions arise in rubber play, but in Duplicate these problems are accentuated because the hands are preserved and thus more readily available for subsequent postmortems. Canada, England and even continental Europe are displaying the same interest in Duplicate which is shown throughout the cities of the United States. The hand used to illustrate today's article was played in a Duplicate Contract tournament in the city of Winnipeg and provided some varied bidding.

North—Dealer.

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1◇(1)	3♠(2)	Pass	3NT(3)
Pass	4♠(4)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—North, with 4½ honor-tricks, has little fear whatever of an adverse game.

2—Actually, a bid of four spades would be perfectly sound. While the contract may be defeated 1 trick, the honors are compensation and the defensive strength of East's hand is practically nil.

3—This is an excellent bid, as it will be noted that West can make three no trump against any opening whatever. If a spade is opened, he must run 9 spade tricks before surrendering the lead and the opening of any other suit gives him an additional trick.

4—East refuses to give up the count of his honors, an important feature in Duplicate, to permit play at notrump.

In the play, South opened a diamond in response to his partner's bid. East won with a trump and proceeded to lead eight rounds of spades. North followed once and was then forced to find seven discards. He chose to bare the Ace of diamonds and Ace of clubs. East had kept an accurate record of the cards played and threw North in the lead with a club after playing his last trump. North could do nothing but catch the three Aces, being compelled to concede the last trick to Dummy's King of hearts.

The brilliant play and accurate counting of the cards compensated for the overenthusiastic bidding.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Question: How many honor-tricks should you have to open the bidding First or Second Hand when vulnerable?

Answer: Two and one-half plus at least a Queen.

(Copyright, 1932.)

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Mr. Culbertson will be glad to answer questions on bidding and play of hands sent in by readers. Address him in care of The Washington Post, inclosing a 2-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Jane Corbett INTERPRETS the MODE

New York, Feb. 4.

SOMEBODY said that perfume should only be used on the flesh. Somebody else said that it should never be used on the flesh but only on cloth. And then the fight was on.

But, noboddie ever asked ME how perfume should be worn! So I'm going to tell you, unasked.

For perfume is one of the mystic arts, as deadly as any other tremendous force when in the hands of a novice, as subtle as the poisons and medicines it resembles when used with skill. And every lovely lady must have at least a working knowledge of perfume, if not a real art in its use, which a truly elegant woman has.

Let's take the first statement. Perfume should be used on the flesh, but only on certain parts of it. Perfume clings to flesh, is warmed by it and throws off a changed odor, a warm, vital odor, when the skin is clean. But when it is applied to any parts of the skin that necessarily throw off a disagreeable odor, the result is disasterous. Hence one should perfume the flesh only on the backs of the hands, the elbows and inside the elbows, the time honored cubbyhole behind the ears, and spray the coiffure and back and shoulders with it when in evening dress. Oh, one may anoint the arch of the foot, and the knees if one desires! Otherwise, perfume should not be applied to the flesh anywhere else on the body.

Now, as to perfuming one's clothes, here there is a danger, too. Sadly enough, perfume often stains materials, and even if stainless, will leave a water ring or even change the color of the frock itself.

Wise women know this, and perfume their lingerie straps, letting the perfume dry well before putting on their frock; and behind the fur collars, on the cloth part only, of coats; inside their gloves; and on all the inside seams of dresses, before the dress is put on, and when it is wrong side out and hanging up. The reason is obvious—no danger of spots and ruined frocks this way.

And liquid perfume must never be put on fur. That is why Helm and LeLong have produced "powdered perfume," our old friend the sachet powder, in a new bottle!

Oh, I could go on and on about this fascinating art! But my delightful editor wants other things written about today.

* * * *

Fer instance, the six-in-one dress that this week's leaflet tells you how to make, from two yards and a half of material! Yes, ankle length, and for any size up to forty-four, smaller sizes taking even less material. 'Case you missed the announcement, this dress has six different new sleeve ideas that are worn with it on a gulmp, and a little neck touch to match each sleeve—which results in our having six completely new and different frocks instead of one! Not only that, but the basic design of the dress itself is one of the most flattering, graceful and most easily made dresses we ever laid eyes on—in fact, La Chic Secretaire, the Beeoo-tiffel sister, and your Dah-ray herself each have a dress or two made on these very same lines!

Better send that stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Post for the leaflet that tells you how to make it! Oh yes, and the six sets of sleeves, too, of course.

* * * *

And the rest of that was, that after three nights of propping my tired limbs wa-a-a-a-a-y up over my head while reading—yes, right up against the wall so that my silken pyjamahed hips were against the wall, I found that it not only rested them, but actually did make them firmer and slimmer!

Try it—and don't give up for a week—then see what happens!

Just how classically simple is meant by the innocent word "simple" which we read so often describing the evening mode, you are invited to see for yourself. I have selected two evening gowns from Bernard et Cie to illustrate this, and want to tell you that it is gowns like these that are selected and worn by the most elegant and wealthiest European elegantes. Each is in a soft, odd color—one, violine, a rosey violet, and the other rosey gray. And these models have been worn by several of the "haute monde" this season.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

MORE TYPES OF ACIDOSIS.

IN the treatment of acidosis the use of bicarbonate of soda has only a very limited field, according to modern opinion. In all conditions due to this cause effort is made to find the type and cause, and treatment is based on those findings rather than on an effort to neutralize an acid.

One of the most serious forms of acidosis is that which results from carbon monoxide poisoning. Dr. V. E. Levine estimates the amount of this gas made by an average automobile, under average conditions, as about two cubic feet per minute, or enough to kill a man in a small, tight garage in two and a half minutes of operation on the part of the engine. A small Ford would require five minutes to do the job in similar circumstances. However, garage exposure is only one item in the list of industrial and household procedures in which there is danger of carbon monoxide poisoning. The immediate danger of asphyxiation by this gas is supplemented by the dangers of edema of the brain and pneumonia, not to mention chronic poisoning and its symptoms.

The approved treatment of all acute effects of carbonic monoxide is inhalation of a mixture of 95 parts oxygen and 5 parts carbonic acid gas.

It is thought the best treatment of morphine poisoning is inhalation of a mixture of 90 per cent oxygen and 10 per cent carbonic acid gas. This can be given with an inhalator or by means of a stream of the gas mixture flowing over the face.

Surgeons now combine carbonic acid gas with their anesthetic when they use ether. It lessens the amount of ether used, prevents waste, quickens anesthesia, and lessens the chance of gas pains, thrombus embolus, and pneumonia following operation.

The treatment of acidosis due to loss of too much fluid is injection into the peritoneal cavity, the veins, or sometimes into the tissues, of a solution of glucose and bicarbonate of soda. In this form of acidosis some good may follow taking soda by mouth.

In acute acidosis of acute Bright's disease, especially in uremic coma and convulsions, it is proper to give alkalis. Bicarbonate of soda is useful and so are the various forms of lime, such as the acetate. According to Dr. Levine, oxygen inhalations are helpful at times.

A more chronic manifestation of acidosis in more chronic forms of Bright's disease is met by the use of a vegetable and fruit diet and decreased use of acid-forming meats, eggs, breads, and cereals, Dr. Levine advises that exposure to sunlight and lamp therapy, and the use of heat in various forms, be added to our list of remedies used in the treatment of acidosis. Cod liver oil, viosterol, and radiated foods are of service in that they increase the alkalinity of the blood.

TOO MUCH CONDIMENTS.

J. R. writes: Is candied orange peel harmful? Many people have told me that it is.

REPLY.

Not particularly so if eaten in small quantities. It is a confection or candy containing a moderate amount of the oil of the peel. This is a condiment. Too much candy may be harmful. The same is true of condiments.

REMEDY FOR SNEEZING.

W. P. T. writes: I used to have very disagreeable sneezing spells lasting sometimes two hours, and other times all day. During one of these spells I tried inhaling old-fashioned smelling salts with good results. Since then I have carried a bottle of smelling salts with me. If I start sneezing I take a snuff of the salts.

OFFICE COLD FEET.

J. P. T. writes: You implied recently that there wasn't any handy cure for cold feet in the office. Now, I wonder.

Electricity is fairly cheap. How about putting a big fan or two in strategic places on the floor and shooting a heavy stream of cold foot air right up into the ceiling of hot air? Wouldn't it spread and crowd downward the hot air there? It occurred to me theoretically that this might be more effective than putting the fan overhead and blowing the hot air down as the foot cushion of cold air might dam that off the floor. Then, too, if the apartment below admits, how about a couple of gratings in the floor to let the warm air up through and the cold aid down through?

Condemn a few architects to do their office work in just such a room and wear slippers and its dollars to doughnuts they would find a cure. As it is, 'tis not their feet that get cold.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

ONE IMPERFECT HUSBAND.

DEAR Frances McDonald:

I'll start this letter by admitting that I don't read more than three of your articles a year, and then not that many unless somehow my eye is attracted to it. This happened yesterday, and I read all of Elsie's smug little letter.

Perfectly married, and never an argument. A complete understanding and never an argument. What is wrong? Aren't they on speaking terms with each other?

The man: So Elsie's friends tell her that Mr. Elsie is a jewel; that he is different. What does she expect them to say to her face? That he's no different from other self-satisfied morons, or those so-called men who wear maroon cravats., boutonnieres and gaily wave their handkerchiefs when bidding good-by to the "boys" at the bowling alley?

And he helps with the home work? Well, what man doesn't help with such work to some extent? There's a yard to clean, a basement to keep somewhat tidy, floors to polish, paint to retouch, a furnace to keep going, maybe some snow to shovel away, and some odds and ends of repair work.

But maybe Mr. and Mrs. Elsie live in a parlor, bedroom and sink apartment, where they don't have to do these things. Then it is necessary for Mister Elsie to don a house dress and play maid-of-all-work in order to maintain his manly form. Of course, most men don't work in the kitchen and help prepare the meals, but then, most real wives know how to cook without giving the diners indigestion. Too, they prefer to do things their own way, although they don't object to help with the dishes later.

The woman: Never nags, never abuses. Probably just wants to lie around like a sick turtle dove that wants to be babied. I note, however, that when Mr. Elsie returns home after "whooping it up" by watching the bowlers, he reports what he has done and how he did it. I wonder whether there would be any nagging or abusing if the report weren't forthcoming.

The couple: I've seen many just like them. Always talking about themselves, their married life, the home life of their friends and acquaintances, and comparing their wedded bliss with that of others, greatly to the disadvantage of the latter. It's sickening. If they would consider the feelings of others or knew the thoughts in most persons' minds, they'd act more like human beings.

Now, Miss McDonald, I'm almost through. You've learned my reaction to Elsie's letter. Have you had any other comments? I'll close with just one word for Mr. and Mrs. Elsie:

"Let go of each other's hands for a while and start swinging. Check up on yourselves to discover that you're fooling only yourselves. Raise a family so that all your selfish love, now going to waste, may be put to use. And tend to your own jobs."

C. W. I.

Plain to be seen this lad's wife showed him our column with Elsie's enthusiastic letter concerning her still congenial husband. No doubt the average husband was shown that letter—with suitable comment by his wife—after the daily argument as to the lateness of dinner or the children's shortcomings, would react just as this one did. That is just why we published those perfect husband letters—to give the mean husband a ride! A nice free ride at our expense. All the long-suffering wife had to do was read the column and pass it along to the hero—and watch the smoke! We happen to know, personally, couples who are just as congenial as Elsie and her husband, and married far longer. We know also husbands like this one, who consider haggling as an accepted part of marriage, and would like to convince all the world that it is such a part. These are the men who are almost strangers in their own homes, knowing almost nothing of the affairs of their own children, who have learned from mother to keep everything from dad to save argument.

People can be married, C. W. I., and still find each other congenial and agreeable—believe it or not!

You'll be surprised at the small amount of material needed. Style No. 741 for the four-year size takes but 1 yard of 35-inch material with 2 yards of ruffling for the blouse with ⅞ yard of 35-inch material and ¼ yard of 35-inch lining for the trousers.

You can find many suitable remnants. And this darling suit will cost you next to nothing.

Indoor—Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

SYMPTOMS OF INSECT ATTACKS.

When your palms take on a dejected appearance and cease to put forth new leaves, examine the under sides of the foliage and the stems of the leaves. In nine cases out of ten you will see brown, hard-shelled little insects which are known as scale. These do not seem like ordinary insects, but they are. The thing to do is immediately to scrub them off. This will not be hard to do if you use a stiff brush and cold soapy water or a nicotine solution.

If your plants become infested with a small white fly and you do not notice the pests until they are in epidemic form, all you can do is to throw away your plant and replace it with one that is free from insects. If, however, you discover the insects while they are young, you can soon clean the plants by spraying them with nicotine.

If you have some soft-wooded plants on your windowsill, such as coleus or heliotrope, and you notice they have some wee cottony tufts on the under sides of the leaves or where they join the main stems, you may be sure they are mealy bugs. Immediately try spraying the plants with a forceful spray of cold water. If this does not have the desired effect, try touching each tuft with a brush dipped in strong nicotine solution.

For aphides (green, brown or black lice) there is nothing better than constant spraying with nicotine solution, though, if you spray the plants before they are covered with aphides you may find cold water just as efficacious as the tobacco solution. Some growers feel it is safer to dip the tops of the plants into the solution than to use a spray. The effect is about the same.

Most people do not understand about the worms which occasionally appear in the soil of plants which they have brought into the house from the garden. They think that they eat the roots of the plants. This is a mistake. They do not eat the roots, and, in fact, they keep the soil open, which is an advantage. However, in squirming around they sometimes fill the drainage hole in the bottom of the pot. When this is the case, pour some limewater over the soil. This will cause them to come to the surface, where you can destroy them.

Women's Bureau Finds Opposition

City Heads Unfavorable to Proposal in Letter to House Committee.

Unfavorable action on the bill to establish a Women's Bureau, under an assistant superintendent of police, in the Police Department here, was recommended to the House District committee yesterday by the District Commissioners.

"As the bureau is now functioning satisfactorily as a part of the Police Department, no reason is apparent why there should be any further legislation concerning it," the Commissioners wrote Chairman Mary T. Norton (Democrat), New Jersey.

The letter added that "there is no thought of discontinuing the bureau." An unfavorable report on the bill to increase annual leave of policemen and firemen also was recommended.

SUPERVISOR BOARD TO MEET OFTENER

Fairfax County's Business Found to Require Two Monthly Sessions.

The board of supervisors of Fairfax County, Va., will hold two meetings each month in the future. The meeting on the first Wednesday of each month will be devoted to the consideration of bills and routine county business and on the third Wednesday it will receive delegations and consider special legislative problems.

This action was taken at the regular monthly meeting in view of the large amount of public business to be transacted. The members stated that much of the county was rapidly becoming urban and the problems arising from this condition were increasing so rapidly that it was impossible to efficiently handle all county business and problems in one day.

Warns of Decrease in Values.

County Commissioner of Revenue James U. Kincheloe appeared before the board, warning them that there will be a decrease in the tangible property values in the county this year. He stated that in preparing the budget the decrease to be considered would be between $100,000 and $200,000. He declared that this was due to the decrease in the number and value of dairy cattle and the smaller number of new cars purchased by the residents of the county, according to the reports of dealers.

Resolutions were presented to the board by the Mount Vernon, Providence and Pioneer Granges and other orgnaizations indorsing the work of the home demonstration and county agricultural agents and asking that these offices be continued during the next year. The Annandale School and Civic League filed a resolution with the board protesting the recent 10 per cent cut in salaries of lower paid county employes as unfair.

A public hearing on the proposed county budget for next year will be held by the board on March 1 in the county courthouse.

Water Supplies Tested.

The water supplies of the towns in Fairfax County are being tested for purity and safety. The work is being done by Adolph Wagner, assistant engineer of the State health department. The wells in the town of Herndon are now being tested and the wells of the municipal systems of the towns of Fairfax and Falls Church will be checked. Should the tests show that the central water supply is not pure and safe for human consumption it is stated that Mr. Wagner has the authority to close the wells of the town producing unsafe water.

This work is part of the campaign of the State health department for insuring a good water supply during the bicentennial celebration. The water supplies of tourists camps and other public places on the main highways in Fairfax County have been inspected, a check has been made by the State inspector to see that the owners are carrying out the State's recommendations. It is stated that in three places the owners were not complying with the regulations and that the safe water signs furnished by the State were removed from the premises.

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 4.—Delegate Hugh Reid, of Arlington County, announced today that the Federal Government will receive no further aid from Virginia in the development of the Mount Vernon Memorial highway because of court action begun in Washington to establish the title of the United States to certain property along the Virginia shore of the Potomac River.

Virginia's contribution would have been $50,000. Reid had planned to introduce a bill at this session of the General Assembly to appropriate $25,000, and Gov. John Garland Pollard had included in the State budget this amount, contingent upon the raising of a like sum by the residents of northern Virginia. The bill and plans to revive the Ball park and planning act have been abandoned at least until the suit is settled, Reid said.

The suit is the first of a series to acquire title for the Federal Government of approximately 200 acres claimed to be below the high-water mark existing at the time Maryland ceded the District of Columbia area to the United States.

The property is described in part as "all land lying south and east of the old Washington and Alexandria turnpike and between the original high-water lines of the Potomac River on the mainland of Virginia and on Alexanders Island as said high-water lines existed at the date of the cession of the property from Maryland." This includes all portions of the river bed occupied by and appurtenant to the Mount Vernon highway.

It was stated that the section known as Shallow Bay and Roaches Run, in which a causeway has been constructed, is included.

It was understood the Government plans to file several more suits, in one of which title to a portion of Hoover Field will be claimed.

elevator because of a lame foot. Mrs. Hoover's gown last night was one to deserve special mention. It was of cotton, a tribute to Southern industry, and fashioned after an old picture of her mother, in a gown worn in the late 70's, and charming to the last degree. It was of dimity with tiny blue figures through it, made with a fitted bodice and a long skirt. The neck was a moderate V shape in front, and round in the back, and the sleeves, half length, were formed of tiny ruffles. The skirt was long and had a short train, and there were a number of narrow ruffles put on in scallops of black velvet in the quaint old fashion. A twist of black velvet outlined the coil of hair low at the back of her head, and ended in a bow of black velvet at the right side. She wore white gloves.

Mrs. Hurley was in a gown of turquoise blue satin made with a strapback and a short train.

Mrs. Adams wore a gown of wine-colored velvet fashioned with a train.

Mrs. Wilbur was in a gown of white georgette crepe simply made with the decolletage outlines with white tube beads.

Mrs. Lamont was in a gown of velvet, the bodice of which was a soft Alice blue and skirt a deeper shade of blue.

Mrs. Doak wore a gown of pale blue satin daintily embroidered with crystal beads.

The first to greet the President and Mrs. Hoover were the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Ballantine, who had with them their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Cross, of Boston. Mrs. Ballantine wore figured lame and Mrs. Cross was in red crepe. The members of the Cabinet circle scattered very generally through the whole suite of parlors. The retiring Secretary of the Treasury and the new Secretary were noted in a remote corner where they were not disturbed by any one, in a long conversation over their cigars.

Two distinguished guests who were warmly greeted on every side were Dr. and Mrs. Charles Rann Kennedy, of Millbrook, N. J. Mrs. Kennedy wore a graceful gown of dark green velvet with rare amber necklace.

Frieda Hempel wore a scarlet silk gown. She was escorted by Robert J. Grant, director of the Mint, and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dunham.

The Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Julius Klein were among the absentees, but Col. Clarence M. Young, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, was present. Mr. Klein left for Columbus, Ohio last evening and will return to Washington tomorrow.

Others present were the Second Assistant Postmaster General, Mr. Warren Irving Glover; the Third Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. Frederic A. Tilton; the First Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Joseph M. Dixon, who had with them their daughters, Miss Betty Dixon and Miss Peggy Dixon. Mrs. Dixon wore a gown of black velvet made with a short train and cut low in back. Miss Betty Dixon wore a frock of black satin and Miss Peggy Dixon was gowned in pink crepe, trimmed with blue.

Also present were the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and Mrs. Charles J. Rhoads, the Director of Geological Survey and Mrs. W. C. Mendenhall, the latter wearing a gown of wine velvet; the Director of National Park Service and Mrs. Horace M. Albright, the Assistant Secretary of Labor, Mr. Robe Carl White, and the Commissioner of Naturalization and Mrs. Raymond F. Crist, the latter wearing a frock of wood violet velvet made with a bodice of lame.

ARLINGTON POLICING DEFENDED BY FIELDS

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Answering the petition forwarded by residents of Radnor Heights, Arlington County to Gov. John Garland Pollard, charging several houses were entered in that section with no action by the local authorities, Sheriff Howard B. Fields last night declared that he has never been called by any citizens seeking police protection without an officer being sent if he did not go himself.

"It is true that there was a case of this character brought to my attention some time ago," he said. "It was immediately investigated by my office. There was evidence that it was the work of boys and everything was done and is being done to cope with like conditions which are from time to time reported to me from other sections of the county."

He stated that he was asked by one of the residents to station an officer at Radnor Heights at night to patrol the roads, but that this was impossible; the force being insufficient to use men for night duty.

Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas announces that tomorrow morning he will present to the Arlington County board recommendations as to the best method for collection of approximately $225,000 in delinquent real estate taxes.

Among other matters which Douglas will take up with the board will be the question of how the board can handle the Falls Church water supply which is now being furnished by the county to a part of East Falls Church within the county.

Arrangements for annual ladies' night of Arlington County Monarch Club were completed at its meeting held yesterday at Windsor Arms. The banquet and entertainment will be held the evening of February 25 at the Army-Navy Country Club. Grayson Ahalt is chairman of the committee on arrangements and is being assisted by Maynard Carlisle and O. G. Snyder.

The Arlington Volunteer Fire Department held its monthly meeting in the firemen's hall last night. It was voted to hold an oyster supper the evening of February 17 in cooperation with the woman's auxiliary. Chief A. C. Scheffel was authorized to proceed with the organization of a Red Cross first-aid class.

Police Court Fines $1,956 for Month

$896 Is Collected From Traffic Law Violators in Montgomery.

Fines in criminal cases totaling $1,956 were collected in January by the Montgomery County police court at Rockville, Md., according to the report presented to the Montgomery County commissioners yesterday by Frank I. Davis, clerk of the police court. Costs collected in civil cases totaled $59.

The sum of $896 for motor vehicle law violations and $25 for game law violations are deducted and sent to the State authorities, leaving a balance of $1,033 from fines and the $59 from civil costs to be added to the county police fund.

The county commissioners received a bid to furnish radio sets for county police courts from a Washington distributor, who quoted prices of $83.39 per set. The commissioners took no action on whether county cars are to be provided with the sets.

In the distance, Regiensi and Touge saw waving palm trees and bright, shining pools of water, according to messages from Lenier, and they started out toward them to get water.

Authorities said they were afraid the two fliers had been led astray by a mirage and redoubled their efforts to find them.

Meanwhile, an air patrol of five airplanes, led by the famous desert soldier, Col. Vuillemin, combed the great sandy area.

"Burn your oil; make a smoke signal," he wirelessed to Lenier.

FISCAL DATA GIVEN ALEXANDRIA COUNCIL

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
Phone Alexandria, 523.

City Council yesterday afternoon received the financial report of the city manager for the calendar year of 1931 and adopted the resolution offered with the report that all city departments which show a cash balance over the amount allocated to it in the budget allow the balance to be used by departments that exceeded the amount considered necessary for their operation at the time the budget was compiled. This was necessary in view of the unexpected street work, oiling, grading and resurfacing in the newly annexed territory, due in part to laying gas mains in that section.

The report stated that the budget totaled $496.44 less than anticipated, while tax collections to date have been $8,380 less than contemplated in the budget. On January 1, 1932, uncollected taxes for 1931 amounted to $104,388. During the year street improvements totaled $87,043.25, authorized by special appropriations. Of this amount, $25,091.35 was paid by property owners, leaving a net capital outlay of $41,951.90.

Overexpenditures Cited.

The budget allowance for the city jail was not sufficient; also the street work and temporary loan allowance was overexpended. The overexpenditure in street work was $8,946.31; the city jail, $3,547.55, and the temporary loan interest was $3,404.40 over the amount allowed. The cash balance in the city treasury on January 1, 1932, was $15,377.02.

Mrs. Carroll H. May, of 418 North Washington street, representing the Parent-Teacher Association of Jefferson School, requested permission for the pupils of that school to sell sandwiches on the streets on February 22, from baskets, and also to sell from a stand to be erected at some point along the line of march. Action on this was deferred.

Former Councilman Thomas J. Fannon submitted the report of the District Almshouse at Manassas, Va., with an audit, which was extremely satisfactory, and council instructed the clerk to write a letter of appreciation to Mr. Fannon.

P.-T. A. Group Appears.

A delegation of members of the Parent-Teacher Association of Jefferson School appeared to stress the hardship worked on the pupils having to attend the West End School Building in the stopping of a bus to that school. Those in the party included Mrs. Irvin Diener, Mrs. Robinson Moncure, Mrs. E. T. Stultz, Mrs. Hunt Roberts and Mrs. J. Owen Lynch.

A letter was received from Addison H. Willey, treasurer of Arlington Post, No. 12, Disabled American Veterans, asking permission to sell a novelty on the streets on February 22. Action was deferred.

A letter was received from William J. Latimer, representing Hechinger & Ney, of Washington, submitting plans for a subdivision at the intersection of Mount Vernon avenue and Russell road. The plans were approved by council.

The matter of a temporary loan of $100,000, or as much thereof as necessary, for city expenses pending the collection of taxes was placed on its first reading.

Charles L. Burgess, of Potomac, yesterday announced his candidacy for the Democratic primary for city council. This brings the entrants to four, Capt. T. M. Hamilton having first entered the race against the two incumbents, Michael T. Dwyer and Benedict Weil, both of whom were elected by the council to fill unexpired terms.

Gun Owner Traced In Murder Inquiry

Montgomery County police have traced the original purchaser of the .32-caliber pistol found near the scene of the murder of Horace D. Waters, 79-year-old merchant of Old Germantown, Md., who was shot and almost instantly killed by two colored holdup men last month.

Mr. Waters was shot with a .45-caliber pistol, but the .32 is believed to have been carried by the companion of the man who did the actual shooting. The manufacturer of the pistol reported that the weapon had been shipped to a man in Olmstead, W. Va., in 1905. Police are endeavoring to trace this man and to eventually trace the ownership of the pistol to the one who threw it away on a bridge about a half mile from the scene of the shooting.

Allie Sidney, colored, of Washington, who is said by police to have been with Buddie Prater, colored, who has been held in connection with the shooting since several days after the affair, on the night of the murder, has been arrested and is being held in the Rockville Jail. Police say that Prater stayed at his home in Boyds the Tuesday night before the shooting and are hopeful of obtaining information from Sidney. Two men from Hagerstown and two from Cumberland, who were arrested a week ago, still are being held, although police do not believe they had anything to do with the shooting.

2 GIRLS AND MAN SHOT BY AUTOMOBILE ASSASSIN

Park Library about 9:30 o'clock," she said. "I saw the girls walking on the west side of the street, and then I noticed a large black sedan moving slowly south on Fifth street. I noticed it particularly because it was running without lights. I could not see the tag numbers.

Car Rapidly Disappears.

"The car slowed down when it got opposite the girls, and then I heard a rapid succession of shots. The car speeded up and disappeared down Fifth street."

Mrs. Wilson said she ran over to the girls and found one of them supporting the other.

There were no witnesses to the shooting of Mr. Backus. He had to crawl a quarter of a block to the home of a neighbor to summon aid, although his son, sitting in the front room of the house, heard the shot.

Mr. Backus told police that he had just turned into Mount Pleasant street from Newton street and was only about 60 feet from his home, when a large black sedan, moving south on Mount Pleasant street, slowed down as it approached him.

Car Repasses Victim.

One shot was fired at him. It took effect in the small of his back and he crumpled to the street. Then, he said, the sedan moved rapidly away.

The occupants of the car apparently did not know that Mount Pleasant street in that neighborhood ends in a blind wall at the foot of a hill. The car turned at the bottom of the hill and passed by the wounded man again, but no other shots were fired.

Mr. Backus crawled to the home of Mrs. Helen Brundage, 1733 Newton street northwest. She called the Emergency Hospital ambulance.

Mr. Huestis said he had just stopped his car on Fifth street above Aspen and his wife was getting out to go into the home of a neighbor.

.32-Caliber Bullet Found.

The black sedan passed by him, he said, and when it drew opposite the girls he heard the outburst of shots. He ran to the scene and found Mrs. Wilson with the girls. He placed Miss Andrews and Miss Beall in his car, and took them to the home of Dr. Arthur Shannon, 113 Carroll street, Takoma Park. Mr. and Mrs. Heustis could not agree on the make of the car.

Dr. Shannon found that one of the bullets had passed through Miss Andrews' left arm and had lodged in her pocketbook, which she was carrying clutched to her breast. The other had almost passed through the arm at the wrist. He dug that out. It was a .32 copper-coated slug. Police said it could not have been fired from an automatic pistol or a machine gun.

Detective Sergt. John Dalgish said the bullet, which was .32-caliber and copper-coated, entered the left side of Mr. Backus' back and pierced the colon, struck the left kidney and entered his stomach. His condition is regarded as grave.

L. C. Mitchell, of 6813 Fifth street northwest, was sitting in a living room in the front of his home at the time of the attack on the girls. He was the only one who gave police a definite statement of the number of shots fired. He said he counted five in rapid succession, and ran out in time to see a large black sedan moving rapidly down Fifth street.

Not to Blame, Girl Says.

Most witnesses agreed that two men were riding in the car which bore the assailants of the two girls. They could not agree on the make of the car.

As Miss Andrews left the physician's office, she turned to Miss Beall and said: "Please, please, don't blame this on me," according to police.

Soon after the two girls left the house, Mrs. D. M. Andrews, mother of Helen, received two mysterious telephone calls for her daughter in rapid succession, she told police. Both of the calls were from men, she said. When told that Helen was not at home, whoever was calling asked where she was and was told that she had gone to the library.

The two girls were first taken by police to the home of Miss Andrews and questioned for a short time. Then Miss Beall was taken to her own home.

Police are working on the theory that the attack on the girls and Mr. Backus were not related.

They broadcast lookouts for different types of cars in the two cases. In the official broadcast of a lookout for the girls' assailants, the license plates on the machine were given as District tags.

Mr. Backus told police that the sedan bearing the gunmen who shot him had Maryland tags, the first three numbers of which were 290——.

Mistaken Identity Blamed.

A motive for the Backus shooting was furnished police by John W. McDonald, of 3417 Mount Pleasant street northwest, who lives a short distance from Mr. Backus' home. He is a narcotic inspector and believed the men were attempting to kill him because of his activity in drug cases. In his opinion, the gunman mistook Mr. Backus for him.

Two persons heard the shot which felled the Department of Agriculture worker. One of them was his son, Gordon Backus, jr., 16, who was in the front room of the Backus home. The other was De Teel Tiller, son of Theodore Tiller, Washington newspaper man. Both said they thought the shot was the backfire from an automobile and paid no attention to it.

Mrs. Mary T. Backus, wife of the wounded man, was at their home at the time, but did not hear the shot. In addition to Gordon, jr., the family has three other sons, William, 19; Henry, 18, and John, 15.

The affair is open to the public, a silver offering being taken for expenses, and any amount over the expenses will be given to the Alexandria United Charities. The Rev. Dr. William J. Duckett to Study Street Work Ban

Requests Colmar Manor Council to Send Copy of Ordinance.

T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the Suburban Sanitary Commission, has written to the town council of Colmar Manor asking for a copy of the ordinance on the basis of which policemen have been directed to arrest any person cutting streets without a permit.

The controversy began when the commission attempted to cut streets to make water connections. The commission contends that its charter from the State specifically exempts it from the necessity of obtaining such permits from the incorporated towns. It must leave the streets in good condition, however.

The town law requiring permits for street work was passed last fall when the $80,000 paving program was inaugurated. It was enacted to give the town control of street cutting and make sure that the paving was satisfactorily replaced. In commenting on his efforts to cooperate with the town, Mr. Duckett pointed out that the commission had changed the height of manhole covers to correspond with the new grades of the town's streets.

GIRL'S BODY FOUND; STRANGLER SOUGHT

New York, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Police tonight arrested Fred Hicks, 51, a Negro, in connection with the death of 5-year-old Florence McDonnell, whose body was found in the basement of a tenement house today. After questioning he was held on a murder charge.

New York, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Golden-haired Florence McDonnell, 5-year-old Brooklyn kindergarten pupil, was found strangled to death in the basement of a vacant Brooklyn store today, after hundreds of detectives had spent the night searching for her.

A hole 3 feet deep was found in a yard behind the store. Police said the slayer apparently had intended to bury his victim, but had been frightened away when daylight came.

The McDonnell child vanished from in front of her home at 4 p. m. yesterday. Medical examiners said she apparently had been slain before 9 p. m.

Suspect Is Questioned.

A Negro, whose identity police kept secret, was questioned as a suspect. Neighbors said they saw him talking to Florence a few minutes before she disappeared.

Although the building in which the killing occurred had been occupied until 2:30 p. m. yesterday by a band of roving Gypsies, and Florence had played with the Gypsy children, police said they doubted the band had anything to do with the slaying.

"Gypsies often kidnap, but they never kill," said Chief Inspector Vincent J. Sweeney.

The little blue-eyed child vanished almost a year to the day after one of her playmates had been strangled to death. Since then three other children in the neighborhood have been attacked.

Wide Hunt Was Made.

When she failed to return from playing in the street for supper, her mother, Mrs. Thoma McDonnell, notified police. As the hours went by and no trace of the child was found, every available detective in Brooklyn was ordered to join in the hunt.

With floodlights illuminating the whole neighborhood, the officers searched alleys, backyards and vacant buildings.

At noon 20 detectives went to the basement of the store, which is only 75 feet from the McDonnell home. The body lay in the center of the floor. A sledge hammer apparently had been used to break a slab of concrete in the yard and then the slayer had started to dig the grave. An assistant medical examiner said the kidnaped child had not been criminally assaulted.

On learning of the discovery of the body the child's mother collapsed. Physicians said she was in a grave condition.

Electoral Reform Bill to Be Debated

Paris, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Advocates of an electoral reform bill finally obtained assent of the Chamber of Deputies tonight to discuss the measure article by article beginning tomorrow, after a night-and-day battle against a Socialist filibuster.

Although the measure, which would discontinue second elections in districts where they first failed of a majority for any one candidate, is a majority bill, the government has not taken a position. Tonight's vote was 312 to 250.

The chamber also decided today, 314 to 263, to discuss a date for hearing a Socialist interpellation on Far Eastern events. The Socialists today criticized France's position, while the Communists charged the government was abetting Japan.

Hearings Ordered On "16-to-1" Silver

Senate Subcommittee Is Named on Wheeler's Measure.

(Associated Press.)

A Senate finance subcommittee was appointed yesterday to hold hearings on the Wheeler bill calling for the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 with gold.

Chairman Smoot appointed a subcommittee of Senators Keys (Republican), New Hampshire, chairman; Thomas (Republican), Idaho, and Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky. The subcommittee will begin hearings Saturday with 70 representatives of the Farmers Union from the Middle Western States appearing.

The bill, introduced by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, would remonetize silver on the same basis as advocated in 1896 by William Jennings Bryan.

Services Fixed at Site Of Washington's Birth

A commemorative service at Wakefield, Va., birthplace of George Washington, will be held for the late Mrs. Harry Lee Rust, whose work as president of the Wakefield National Memorial Association was to a great extent responsible for the restoration of the house and graves of the first President's ancestors, at noon on February 11.

All persons who shared in the work will be welcomed to the service. Date for the formal opening of Wakefield has not yet been announced.

(Associated Press.)

Some $300,000 in German-American mixed claims awards await a claimant at the Treasury Department. Secretary Mellon so informed Congress yesterday in asking a year's extension from March 10, 1932, of the time in which application for payment may be made.

He said the department thus far had been unable to find the persons to whom the money, awarded for World War damages and seizures, is due.

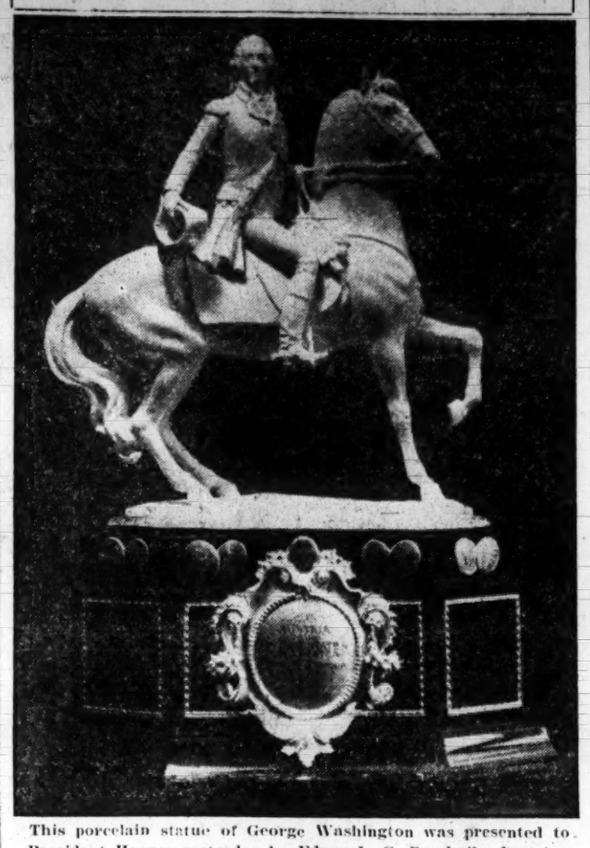
STATUE GIVEN TO HOOVER



This porcelain statue of George Washington was presented to President Hoover yesterday by Edgar L. G. Prochnik, Austrian Minister, as a bicentennial gift from the people of Austria to America.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

IT has come to my knowledge that a considerable number of probably misinformed and misguided "uplift" organizations, antagonistic to the theater and utterly unfamiliar with its practices, plan to wage a vigorous campaign against the adoption of the amendment to the statutes recently introduced in the Senate by Senator Capper and referred without objection to the Senate District committee for consideration.

It was inevitable, of course, that some such thing would happen, regardless of the proposed measure's benefit to all whom it could possibly directly affect. I refer, needless to say, to the amendment of the law which prohibits any child from being employed in a gainful occupation after the hour of 7 p. m. in the District, and the effect it will have upon the present ban that excludes all juvenile performers from accepting regular engagements in our theaters. The law, as it stands, is indefensible.

It is perfectly meet and just that ample provision should be made for the proper education and safeguarding of the young in our theaters or anywhere else. The present statute, however, goes farther than that and deprives the parents of a child of the right to determine whether or not that child may with safety and profit appear professionally on the stage.

There is an instance in mind of a famous juvenile actress who, when on tour, is accompanied by either her father or mother, or both, and a competent tutor. Her life is far more rigorously shielded than that of any child attending public schools. Yet the law says that this child may not appear on a Washington stage after 7 p. m., regardless of the fact that she may have pursued a daily regimen under the watchful eyes of her parents and teacher that precludes physical, mental and moral danger as completely as such things can possibly be circumvented.

This is the ridiculous state of things a few professional "reformers"—or perhaps, after all, they are amateurs—will seek to continue in effect by opposing the Capper amendment to an ill-judged and discriminatory law. The amendment, in the best interests of the public, the theaters and the child performers, should be passed with cheers and dancing in the streets!

And how does it happen, by the way, that children are allowed to take part, under the present statute, in the entertainments given by church organizations, dramatic clubs, dancing schools and the like for which admission charges are assessed?

There is no inclination on the part of this department to deprive juvenile performers of any protection to which they are entitled. Under the amended law they will not be.

That genial and gentlemanly master of ceremonies, Al Mitchell, who so recently won a host of friends by the versatility and polish of his work at the Fox Theater, is returning to his old post on F street next Friday, February 12, to resume his duties where he dropped them a few weeks ago.

As master of ceremonies and conductor of the orchestra, Mr. Mitchell uncorked many musical surprises in the way of intricate orchestration, odd instrumental combinations and the like. He promises upon his return to surpass his every previous record, bringing with him a trunkful of what it takes to make audiences sit up and pay attention.

For the present week, incidentally, beginning today, Phil Lampkin, who was to have played the Fox during the week of Jimmy Dunn's personal appearances but was set back a week, will assume the duties of guest conductor and master of ceremonies.

Mr. Lampkin is a Californian by birth and is the youngest musical director ever to have swung a baton in any of the modern de luxe picture palaces. He is at present only 25 years of age, is left-handed—the only left-handed stick-swisher I can call to mind—and wears glasses. He has presided over the orchestras in the Fox houses in Brooklyn and Detroit and in the Academy of Music in New York.

Charlie Murray, the stage and screen comic, who also exercises a sort of paternal interest in Maxine Doyle, mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, is his closest friend and warmest adviser." He also numbers among his close acquaintances, with most of whom he has been associated musically, Stuart Erwin, "Buddy" Rogers, Jack Mulhall, June Collyer, Frances McCoy, June Clyde and Sammy Cohen.

Very good, Mr. Lampkin, sound your "A."

A special emissary, bearing gifts of myrrh and incense and fine linen, from the Chesterfieldian Mr. Jimmy Lake, Beau Brummel of Ninth street and the sports arenas, conveys his master's greetings and the information that next week, beginning with Sabbath afternoon's matinee, Mr. Lake personally will act as master of ceremonies for the Marathon Idols, Joe Wicks, Red Nichols and Jimmy Barrett, who will appear twice daily at the Gayety throughout the seven-day period otherwise occupied by the "London Gayety Girls."

Perhaps what you would rather hear about than any of this, though, is what the eminent Dr. Florenz Ziegfeld is going to call his new musical production which will have its premiere in the National Theater on Sunday night, February 14, with Bert Lahr, "Buddy" Rogers, June Knight, Lynn Overman and scores more in the cast.

Speculation has been practically rife on this matter for many days now. A great many very terrible titles have been suggested by a great many aspiring suggesters, and, so far as I have been able to check, none of them was decided upon.

Mr. Bernard Sobel, the Ziegfeld publicist de luxe, who arrived in the Capital last evening, brings word that out of all the conferences that have been held on this perplexing subject the following explosive, expressive and easily remembered title for a play about a bull fighter emerged:

"Hot Cha!"

I shudder to think of the number of times during the next ten days that Steve Cochran is going to be asked, "Hot cha go about getting good seats for the show?"

Service, I calls it.

I mean when I explained that it would be impossible to make either party, on account of the depression in everything but official duties, what did Jack Hurford do on his way to Jimmy Dunn's soiree Wednesday midnight but stop by the office with my portion of his chili con carne rout in his pocket—a thermos bottle of hot chili, a glass of olives, ripe and green; a bag of cheese wafers and pretzels, a plate, a fork—although I usually prefer a knife—and two bottles of, let me see, what was that stuff?

Don't tell me, I'll think of it in a couple of days!

Has any one a roast turkey that won't be working about midnight tonight?

2 YOUTHS IN GEORGIA KIDNAP POLICE CHIEF

But Are Captured by Lone Farmer While Scores in Posse Search.

Barnesville, Ga., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Two youths sought as bandits kidnaped the chief of police here today, but possemen rescued him after a running gun battle and finally a lone farmer captured them in a swamp.

While a hundred officers and citizens combed the countryside, the farmer, J. T. Bailey, came upon them deep in the waste land. One made a motion as though to draw something from his pocket and Bailey blazed away with his shotgun, wounding him slightly.

Other possemen arrived soon thereafter and the youths were taken to prison in Macon. They gave their names as J. M. Wilson, 17, and A. T. Wheelis, 19, of College Park, an Atlanta suburb.

Early today Chief of Police Scott received reports that J. P. Wheeler, of Macon, was abducted and robbed last night and that his kidnapers were headed this way.

The chief and Roy Cato, a deputized taxi driver, intercepted the youths on a highway near town and arrested them. En route to the city the prisoners overpowered their captors and proceeded with them through the streets.

Cato succeeded in leaping from the car and spread the alarm. Posses gave chase as the car sped out of town with the chief a prisoner.

The pursuers soon overtook the automobile, but they refrained from shooting for fear of hitting Rievere.

Near the town of Milner the kidnapers struck the chief over the head with a pistol butt and threw him from the car. As the automobiles raced through Milner's streets the gun battle broke loose and ended only when a posseman's bullet punctured a tire on the kidnaping car and the youths fled to the swamp. Rievere was dazed by the blow, but otherwise he was not hurt.

U. S. SKATERS WIN TWO TITLES AS OLYMPICS OPEN

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

THE elimination program to provide an alternate for Jack Sharkey if Max Schmeling should either develop the hiccoughs took a new turn yesterday when Paulino Uzcudun, the Basque woodchopper who has had his own block knocked off on several occasions, was found to be suffering from a cracked rib and unable to go through with his match tonight against Ernie Schaaf at Madison Square Garden.

The Garden folk have drafted one Salvatore Ruggirello to oppose Schaaf in Paulino's stead with the winner then scheduled to meet Baer for the honor of being named alternate to Schmeling or Sharkey in their bout next June for the world championship.

Ruggirello bounded into the spotlight last month by knocking over and out Stanley Poreda, a likely looking New Jersey heavyweight, and by winning his previous fight by a quick knockout, but before those two events he had little to recommend him. In fact, one does not have to go far back into the records to discover that Ruggirello was beaten by our own Marty Gallagher in 1929, and some have been so unkind as to point out to Marty the advantages of the plumbing industry, which he left to follow a boxing career.

The need of an alternate for either Sharkey or Schmeling is somewhat dubious considering that both will be loathe to forego their share in what looms as the biggest gate in the prize ring industry since their fiasco at Yankee Stadium in 1929, when 60,000 fans saw Schmeling take the title sitting down in the fourth round.

Heavyweight history shows there has been no need for an alternate for a championship bout since bare knuckle days, although one notable substitution in a world championship lightweight bout is recorded. On that occasion, Ad Wolgast, the champion, was matched with Freddy Welsh, the Englishman, for twenty rounds in 1909, but on the night before the fight was stricken with an appendicitis attack that required an immediate operation.

The promoters were lucky enough to find an able substitute for the champion in Willie Ritchie, young Californian, who had been making quite a noise in San Francisco, but was not quite proved. Ritchie made a brilliant showing against Welsh and on the strength of the bout was matched three times with Wolgast, finally winning the title from him in 1911.

Another noble experiment in baseball has failed, apparently. A year ago Clark Griffith, boss man of the Washington Club, was enthusiastic over the bonus clause in the contracts of several of his players which he thought would insure a performance commensurate with their pay, and vice versa, but this year's contracts appear to have discarded that idea.

Another who has discarded the bonus plan is Philip de Catesby Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, who launched the idea last winter in an effort to solve the problem of turning out contented ball players. It proved a dud and the Browns' 1932 contracts contain no mention of a bonus clause.

"The bonus plan was a failure and our boys now do not like it," explained Ball, the man who merely grins every October after taking a $150,000 wallop on the chin as a result of tht Browns' perennially low station in the league. "Aside from Chad Kimsey, who picked up a couple of thousand dollars by his relief pitching, and Oscar Melillo, who earned bonus for hitting over .300, none of the players prospered under the bonus plan.

"The strain was too much for them," Ball continued in his discussion of the bonus plan, "particularly on the pitchers. Instead of the prospective bonus acting as a stimulus, the thought of failing to make the grade cramped their style and actually interfered with their work. They are well satisfied to go back to a straight salary and do their best."

One fallacy of the bonus system was taught Griffith last season by Pitcher Alvin Crowder, who cashed in on a $1,000 award for winning eighteen games during the 1931 season.

Crowder's work in the early part of the season was miserable and he was knocked from the box in his first half dozen starts. Due to his failure, the Nationals were never able to figure in the pennant race. With the team irrepairably out of the running, Crowder gained winning form and came through with a remarkable string of victories, including five straight over the Athletics. He won his last three games to reach the eighteen victory mark and his $1,000 bonus at a time when the Nationals drew hardly 1,000 fans to the park on a single day. Crowder's late victories were hardly worth the $1,000 to Mr. Griffith.

Dib Williams Signs With A's; Gets Boost

Conway, Ark, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—The Philadelphia Athletics' shortstop, Dibrell Williams, signed his 1932 contract today with the announcement that it called for a salary increase.

Williams said he believed he would get to play regularly this season, Connie Mack having lost Joe Boley.

Eastern and Central in Feature

Tech Heavy Favorite Over Western in Other Contest.

EASTERN and Central, the two bitter basket ball rivals who finished in a tie for the high school series championship last year, and produced the most thrilling game of the current season last month, when Eastern won, 25-24, with two foul shots in the last few seconds of play, will meet today in Central's last appearance in the popular schoolboy series.

Definitely relegated to third place in the series, Central rates an even chance with Eastern today, although the Easterners are in a first-place tie with Tech. In the last few days, in fact, there has been a definite swing toward Central in the mythical and actual high school betting booths.

Moulton Proves Stars.

Central unleashed a sterling shot last Friday in Jack Moulton, a substitute for the ineligible Billy Burke Moulton scored 18 points in three quarters and showed a passing game quite in keeping with Central's as a team.

Eastern will be without Ben Zola, guard. In yesterday's game with the Wilson Teachers, Eastern's first-string guards, Al Waters and Jack Bayliss, were missing, but are expected back in school today. Eastern has shown itself to be a great finisher, and probably will have to show it again today if they are going to get past this series obstacle. A loss for Eastern would send them into the final game of the series next Tuesday against Tech, faced with the necessity of beating the Manual Trainers to secure even a tie.

Artie Willison, captain and guard, will return to the Tech line-up today against Western. Presumably out of touch with hard and fast basket ball, Willison probably will be used only for a part of the game. It is not likely that he will start. Tech is heavily favored to down the last-place Westerners.

Other Games Are Scheduled.

There are seven basket ball disputes in all to settle today on the scholastic front. Besides the high school series games, there is up for consideration Business vs. the Boys Club, Wilson Teachers vs. Gonzaga, Emerson vs. Washington and Lee Freshmen, St. John's vs. Leonard Hall and Georgetown Prep vs. Friends.

St. John's could beat Leonard Hall only by 29-21 in St. John's gym three weeks ago. Today the tussle will be fought out in Leonardtown.

Mrs. Roosevelt Tries Lake Placid Bob Run

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the governor, rode down the final half mile of the spectacular Mount Van Hoevenberg gob run today, despite the fact that the slide in the past week has sent six German bobsledders to the hospital.

While the governor watched at the bottom, Mrs. Roosevelt came down from Zigzag curve with Harry Homberger, ace of American drivers, on a two-man bob. Gov. Roosevelt officially opened the games this morning.

She complimented Homberger on his skill in handling the sled, and Harry returned the favor by expressing his admiration of her courage. The slide is fairly slow through the last half mile.

Bobby Jones Seeks Talent From Yankees

New York, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Robert T. Jones, jr., in town today in his capacity as an officer of the Atlanta baseball club, discussed the possibility of obtaining some player talent with the New York Yankees but reached no definite agreements. The former world golf champion declared he was hopeful of strengthening the Atlanta club but had no details in shape to make public at this time.

"We are in the process of reorganization," said Jones. "Red Barron ought to make a good manager and I look for a fine season, if we can bolster up the team in a few spots."

District A. A. U. Loses U. S. Women's Swim

Los Angeles, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Inaugurating the new Olympic Swimming Stadium, the National A. A. U. women's indoor swimming championships will be held here April 14 to 17.

Officials of the Pacific Southwest A. A. U. announced the dates today. National A. A. U officials gave permission that the indoor event be staged in the outdoor plunge now nearing completion. The stadium will seat 10,000 persons.

It was understood here by A. A. U. officials that Washington would definitely be the scene of the women's swimming event. Secretary Ferris, of the national A. A. U., said to be the authority on which the District A. A. U. made complete plans to stage the meet. It was to have been a part of the bicentennial sports program and was to have been held in the Shoreham pool.

7 GONZAGANS MAY ENTER EASTERN

Friction Is Given as Cause of Transfer of Athletes.

SEVEN Gonzaga High students, all of them prominent in athletics, made application for registration at Eastern High School yesterday, after leaving Gonzaga High Wednesday because of friction with school heads.

The seven youths, Ed Benjamin, Tom Nolan, Dick Fitzgerald, Victor Perusso, Joe and Carl Mills and Francis Cleary, were tentatively admitted in the overcrowded roster of the Eastern institution by Principal Charles Hart, pending the arrival of papers of credit from Gonzaga. None of the youths had applied for their credits yesterday. They will have to secure them personally from the Catholic school.

Athletes in Meeting.

The athletes met in a body yesterday and it was said they decided upon their move, following friction with school heads over several months duration.

At least two of them have the support of their parents in their proposed shift in alma maters. The parents of two others will meet with Gonzaga authorities today. All are juniors, excepting Carl Mills, who is a sophomore. Principal Hart issued a schedule of studies. They will not attend classes until they present their Gonzaga credits.

Nolan, Fitzgerald and Perusso were sent home from school Wednesday by Gonzaga's prefect of discipline for infraction of certain school rules. The basket ball team, of which they are regulars, lost that afternoon to the Charlottesville Five. The three were invited to witness the game free of charge, but were barred from playing. Gonzaga officials were at a loss to comprehend why the youths had not returned to school yesterday, and why four more athletes had joined forces with them. None of the boys have been expelled from school, it was stated at Gonzaga. All are eligible to return.

5 Are Football Stars.

The Mills twins, Benjamin, Nolan and Cleary were prominent in Gonzaga's brilliant football season last year. Cleary is rated one of the best high school baseball pitchers in the city.

The name of Mills has been associated with Gonzaga's athletic life for more than a generation. Lawrence Mills, sr., was the first of the dynasty, followed by his sons Lawrence and Robert, in the early 1920s, and more recently Joe and Carl.

Ski Jump of 257 Feet Recognized as Record

Ogden, Utah, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—A ski jump of 257 feet made by Alf Engen at Big Pines, near Los Angeles, last Friday, has been recognized as the world's professional record by the Western America Winter Sports Association, it was announced today by A. F. Warden, the secretary.

Engen's former mark, also recognized as a world's record, was 247 feet, made at Ecker Hill, near Salt Lake City, January 1, 1931. He also is credited with a jump of 266 feet made in an exhibition at Ecker Hill this season.

Columbus U. Boxers Win 5 Bouts

By JACK ESPEY.

COLUMBUS UNIVERSITY made its bow in major athletic competition last night, the Crimson boxing team defeating the leatherpushers from Washington and Jefferson College, 5 bouts to 2 on the stage of the Strand Theater. A crowd of 1,000, including District Attorney Leo A. Rover and most of his staff watched in silence, restricted by intercollegiate rules from cheering or applauding the contestants during the course of a round.

In the order of the bouts, the Presidents started at a disadvantage, forfeiting the bantamweight bout because their representative could not appear following scholastic difficulties, but they evened the count when Tom Morrissey outpointed Capt. Harry Allen of Columbus in the featherweight clash.

Columbus then regained the lead never to be headed by Gerald Russo's victory over Bert Fish in the lightweight contest, and Leo Covaleskie, Mickey O'Connor and Gus Mirman added to the winning slate with triumphs in the welter, middle and light heavy bouts, respectively. W. and J. received its second and final point through Ernest Kaiser's technical knockout at the expense of Francis Jahn in the heavyweight division.

O'Connor Wins Feature.

The best bout of the night was fought by O'Connor and Osborne, W. and J. middleweight, as both boys traded blows willingly with O'Connor scoring two knockdowns in the third round. This victory clinched the match for Columbus and O'Connor appeared to be sensing the importance of the event all the way judging from the viciousness that marked his long right-hand smashes to Osborne's head. The visiting middleweight went down for a count of one early in the third session only to encounter another flurry of O'Connor's rights which floored him for nine.

O'Connor, who is the District of Columbia A. A. U. champion in his class, lashed out in the opening session to land squarely on Osborne's head. Osborne retaliated with a stiff left jab to Mickey's face, but the Irishman's blow obviously carried more effect. In the second round O'Connor was missing badly and lost some of his lead as his foe continued to score with a left to the face. The final chapter found the Columbus star forcing the fight from the outset.

Mirman, Columbus light-heavy, displayed a terrific left-hand cross which rocked his rival, Al Demedowitz, almost to sleep in the third round. Mirman drove the W. and J. captain to the ropes, forcing him to hold on. Before the final bell, however, Demedowitz cut loose with a hard right to the head.

Capt. Allen was defeated by Morrissey in the all-important extra round of the featherweight bout when he dropped the offensive and confined himself to covering up from his foe's long-range fire.

UNLIMITED CLASS—Kaiser, W. and J., defeated Jahn, Columbus, technical knockout, 1:45 in first round.

G. W. Quintet Wins 37-35 Thriller

Colonials Annex 9th Straight; William-Mary Victim.

Special to The Washington Post.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Feb. 4.—The George Washington University Colonials defeated the William and Mary Indians here tonight, 37 to 35, in the most fiercely contested combat of many seasons, to win their ninth straight game. Burgess, Colonial forward, accounted for 13 points and claimed high score honors, followed by Parrack, lanky forward, who tallied 12 points for the Colonials.

Litwin led Williams and Mary scorers, accounting for 11 points, 7 of which were claimed from the free line.

Starting at the opening whistle, both teams sprang into action, struggling fiercely for the lead, which zigzagged back and forth throughout the first half.

Western Maryland Rallies.

Hertzler, lanky Colonial center, outtipped Shaffer in practically every toss-up and, backed by the crack shooting of Burgess and Parrack, managed to squeeze out a one-point margin at the end of the first half, 20 to 19.

The second half started with both teams taking long shots and guarding closely. It was marked by roughness as the game became more intense. This spelled tragedy for Gallinant, Indian forward, who left the game on fouls, followed by Parrack, who left via the same route. With only ten minutes to play, the Colonials began to pile up a lead which nearly put the game on ice, but successful long shots brought the lead down to 2 points at the gun.

Hilltop Heads Deny Athletes Have Quit

Refuse to Reveal Nature of Rule Infractions at Hilltop.

Gorgetown University authorities yesterday denied that eleven athletes of the football and track teams had dropped from the rolls of the Hilltop as a result of disciplinary action by the faculty.

There was an infraction of the rules at the Hilltop by members of the staff of the school lunchroom, it was said by the Rev. Vincent J. McDonough, prefect of discipline, but these students are eligible to regain their jobs which assist them in the payment of their college expenses.

None of the students have been expelled, said Father McDonough, who declined to reveal the names of the youths involved, although it was reported that all are members of the varsity football and track teams.

Father McDonough denied that the infractions of the rules dealt with gambling among the students, a report which was published yesterday. He declined to divulge the nature of the infractions.

Within the last two weeks Ben Gellis, promising half back on the football squad, and Ed Skovinski, rangy end, both sophomores, have withdrawn from the school, it was learned reliably.

Blue Blood Bobsled Team Is Not United States' Best Representative, Is Hint

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4—Unofficial reports from Lake Placid suggest a cruel class war between the local bobsledders and the team of society bobsledders from Paris and St. Moritz who formed the first American Olympic bobsled team in the winter games at St. Moritz in 1928.

It was impossible to hold any competitive trials at Lake Placid this year, because the winter was mislaid, and Mr. Jay O'Brien, chairman of the Olympic bobsleigh committee, and captain of his own sled, picked himself and the other members of his old pioneer society crew as one of the American units. There are, however, a number of local bobsledders in the region of Lake Placid who think they are much better than Mr. O'Brien's crew, which includes Eddie Eagan, the society boxer from Denver.

The Lake Placid locals include the four Stevens brothers and Harry Homburger, a youth of 18, who is said to have shortened the Mount Van Hoevenberg course considerably by a trick of taking off from the slide and flying his sled on certain portions of the course. His record at the helm of his sled, 1 minute 52 seconds, is the course and world record, and it is believed that in the Olympic competition he will reduce this time by at least 5 seconds.

O'Brien Selected His Own Team.

The four Stevens brothers are Paul, a ballast man weighing 235 pounds, a trapper and woodsman and a flier of fifteen years' experience; Hubert and Curtis, both captains of sleds, and Raymond, a passenger. Mr. O'Brien, in the absence of official trials for guidance in his selections, picked Homburger's crew, which includes Paul Stevens, for one, and for the other picked his own team on the basis of the success which the society sled achieved in the St. Moritz Olympics, the only previous Olympic bobsled competition in which the United States has participated.

Mr. O'Brien's team includes, besides himself, three other transatlantic commuters, Billy Fiske, the captain and steersman; Eagan and Clifford Gray. The local bobsledders thought Mr. O'Brien showed questionable tact in selecting his own crew, even though they did win at St. Moritz, because they believe there are other Lake Placid crews which should be chosen first on the basis of their recorded performances on Mount Van Hoevenberg.

Local Feeling Raises Head.

The local feeling was betrayed when Ralph J. Ury, of Schenectady, chairman of the registration committee of the Adirondack district, on a technicality suspended O'Brien, Eagan, Gray and several others. They were soon reinstated, upon their compliance with the technicality, which had to do with their certificates of eligibility. So already the Olympic games, which are conducted in the interests of international amity and respect, have failed in their purpose.

The Americans can't even get along with the Americans, and over in Finland the Finns can't get along with their fellow Finn, Clas Thunberg, the great distance skater, who refused to represent Finland at Lake Placid because all the nations represented

Ban on Wimbledon Likely For U. S. Davis Cup Stars

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—America's Davis Cup team this year will in all probability sail overseas with orders to pass up the turf competitions at Wimbledon in favor of more practice on the French hard courts in preparation for the all-important trophy matches.

Louis J. Carruthers, of New York, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, arriving here today to preside over the association's annual sessions, made a flat declaration in favor of the Wimbledon ban for Davis Cup players, seconding the recommendation of Capt. Samuel Hardy of last year's team.

The proposal has been agitated in the Eastern L. T. A., and among early arriving delegates to the national meeting it was generally conceded it would be adopted here Saturday.

Carruthers personally favors sending Sidney Wood to Wimbledon independently to defend his singles championship, but this suggestion will depend upon the ultimate makeup of the cup team. Just who will be in the select group is a moot question, although Ellsworth Vines and Frank Shields appear to have berths sewed up.

In case America should win in preliminary play against Canada, Mexico and the victor in the Australian-Guban match and enter the interzone finals at Paris, Carruthers said, "we have just about reached the conclusion that the players should go direct to the scene of the interzone final.

"This is no reflection on Wimbledon, but we feel we had better stay on the French hard courts for the ten days or two weeks prior to the trophy matches. This will eliminate any let down which might follow Wimbledon play and will reduce the time of the players abroad.

"We are going to make a determined effort to win the Davis Cup this year. No economy plans which the association might adopt will interfere in this matter. We will do everything possible to win the cup."

He expressed the opinion the American team probably has more to fear from Britain's Davis men than from France's.

The national association executive committee meets here tomorrow on the eve of the open convention where a stirring session has been promised in the approval of 1931 ranking players and the annual election of officers.

RUGGIRELLO TO OPPOSE SCHAAF

Italian Substitute for Paulino, Who Has Broken Rib.

First Important Match.

Tall and wide of shoulder the Italian has been fighting around these parts a year or more, but his bout with the hard-hitting sailor will be his first of major importance. He has jumped into the limelight almost overnight with successive knockouts of Walter Cobb and Stanley Poreda, promising heavyweights.

Bucs Sell Grantham To Cincinnati Reds

Pittsburgh, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Shades of the bold band of buccaneers who brought world series gold to Pittsburgh in 1925 frolicked in the icy winds that swept Forbes Field today.

George Grantham, veteran utility infielder, was sold to the Cincinnati Reds and so talk in the Pirate offices turned to the day "the plugger" joined the Bucs and the stirring days that followed.

Of the 1925 titleholders, only Capt. Pie Traynor and Pitcher Remy Kremer remain on the Pirate roster. Grantham came to the Pirates in a deal that set fandom "ga ga" in 1924. Pittsburgh gave Shortstop Rabbit Maranville, Pitcher Wilbur Cooper and First Baseman Charley Grimm to the Cubs for Grantham, Pitcher Vic Aldridge and First Baseman Al Neihaus.

G. U. VICTORY ENDS STRING OF LOSSES

Western Md. Quintet Bows, 25-14, to Hilltop Five.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

MUCH in the manner of rainfall after a drought, or a filet mignon after a month of sardine sandwiches, came sweet victory to Georgetown University's basket ball team last night at Tech High gym. Western Maryland was the victim and the margin was 25 to 14.

It was Georgetown's first victory in the last nine starts, for the goddess of good fortune had not sprinkled them with a smile since January 6, when Baltimore University was conquered. The defeat of the Green Terrors was thorough and impressive, for never once was the winning team behind, although they were pressed to 11-9 at the intermission.

The Green Terrors possessed more elements of greenness than of terror last night and there appeared little alternative for Georgetown other than to win the game. Western Maryland did not score from the floor until 16 minutes of the game had been ticked off, and Georgetown's forces had boosted their total to 10-1. Slim Murray, a gangling-armed forward scored that Western Maryland basket, and he, more than any of his teammates, kept the visiting team in the battle.

Western Maryland Rallies.

Western Maryland looped its shots high over Georgetown's adhesive defensive play to rally near the close of the first half. Wooley dribbled shakily three-fourths the length of the floor and looped in a 20-foot shot; Brown sank one from the middle and these two combined to offer 2 points from the foul line, to help arrange the 11-9 score at the half.

But Georgetown had tasted deep of victory, and found it savory after a steady diet of discouraging court disasters. With the start of the second half, the plays the Hilltoppers manufacture as they go along, in true professional style, began to shake loose the Western Maryland defense, and the Hoya marksmen found sudden heat in their hands.

Connors started out the half by sinking a sideline shot, and followed with a foul. Georgetown was in high gear. Burly Joe O'Neill, a rapidly improving Hoya colorbearer, began to shake his great chassis loose, and LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—Driving through a bitter wind and raging snowstorm, Slim Irving Jaffee, New York veteran, finished a job today that he started four long years ago at St. Moritz and added a brilliant finale to the astonishing American domination of the opening day of the 1932 winter Olympic games.

Whipping through cold and storm, a ferret on skates, Jaffee came from nowhere in the last hundred yards of the 5,000 meters speed skating final to dethrone a defending champion, Ivar Ballangrud, of Norway, snatch the title by inches from a teammate, Eddie Murphy, of Chicago, and match Jack Shea's feat of winning the 500-meter championship earlier in the day.

His marvelous sprint, when he seemed out of the thrilling struggle, sent the American flag flying to the top of the scoring pole for the second time in the day, while a brass band added new eddies to the driving snow as it poured out "The Star-Spangled Banner" under terrific difficulties.

Rewarded After 4-Year Wait.

Four years ago at St. Moritz, in Switzerland, Jaffee, a clerk on leave from a Wall street brokerage office, was leading the 10,000 meters event, heading full steam ahead, for only the second championship the United States ever had won, or was about to win, up to today. But soft ice stopped him half way to the goal. The race was canceled, and he had to wait until today to reach an Olympic finish line in triumph.

Today that triumph, added to Shea's dash to victory in the only other speed event of the day, was enough to surpass within a few hours the total conquests of the United States skaters the two past winter Olympics.

Tonight he was an outstanding favorite to win the 10,000 meters final Saturday, just as Shea is considered a certain winner in the 1,500 meters final tomorrow, and the United States seems assured of its first winter Olympic championship.

As a team, in addition to the only two titles available today, the United States had scored 29 points, 18 of them in the 5,000 meters event where the delegations of Norway and Sweden were expected to dominate the field. Canada, another surprisingly strong contender, stood second with 13, and Norway third and last with 8.

U. S. Defeated at Hockey.

The sole American setback of the day was Canada's 2-to-1 overtime hockey victory over the United States team while Germany was downing Poland by the same score.

With the United States and Canada tied at 1 to 1, Vic Lindquist, Canadian forward, slipped a fast shot past Frank Farrell, in the United States net halfway through the 10-minute overtime period, and, despite the efforts of Ding Palmer, Doug Everett and Johnny Garrison, the former college stars, could not get the goal back.

For all but two minutes of the regulation three periods, the United States threatened to stage the first major upset of the competition, leading, 1 to 0, through Doug Everett's single-handed scoring dash in the second period.

But with only a minute and 50 seconds to go, Hack Simpson, crack Canadian center, broke through to cage a fine angle shot to tie the score.

Jaffee Sets Olympic Record.

Jaffee's time, 9 minutes 40.8 seconds, did not threaten the world record of 8:21.6 Ballangrud holds, but like Shea he is credited with a new Olympic record.

The best Ballangrud could do today with fifth, 10 yards behind the winner, while Evensen, seeking another title to replace what Shea had taken, was inches back in sixth place. Bill Logan, of Canada, finished a good third, edging out Herbert Taylor, New York boy. Frank Stack and Harry Smyth, Canadians, thrown offstride when Evensen lost his balance for a second on the last half of the last lap, finished seventh and eighth, respectively.

Two Olympic champions were dethroned by the conquests of Shea and Jaffee.

Holding the lead from the start of the final heat of the 500 meters dash, Shea sped over the course in 43.4 seconds to beat Bernt Even-

Dempsey Is Among Those Asking, Can He Come Back?

By R. J. NEWLAND.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—What all the boxing world wants to know, Jack Dempsey himself asserts he would like to have answered. Can the old Manassa mauler come back?

Camp followers are daily telling him he can. Jerry Luvadis, faithful Greek trainer since the heydey of his career, leads the optimistic chorus. "Jerry the Greek" says that, contrary to the calculations of his critics, Dempsey "still is nimble on his pins." It is the legs that have been Dempsey's chief worry.

Old Dempsey Punch Still Potent.

Those who have watched him in his bouts during his recent barnstorming campaign are agreed that the old Dempsey punch is as powerful as it ever was. His left hooks have been bowling over opponents, such as they were, with monotonous regularity. Only a few of those who opposed him were able to go the full four rounds.

Dempsey tips the beam around 200 pounds—only about 10 pounds over his old time fighting weight. This is only a minor detail in Dempsey's estimation. "I can take off a few pounds any time I want to. But I'm not going at this thing in a hurried manner. That's why I decided to feel my way back by taking on all these short bouts. Perhaps they were palookas at the start but we're taking on better ones every day."

"Another month of this and I'll know something definite. Until I'm sure in my own mind I'm not going to say yes or no, but don't be surprised if there is a big battle some place one of these days.

Appears Fit, Outwardly.

"I'm doing my best to get ready and if and when I do get ready, my manager, Leonard Sacks, will take care of the other details."

To all outward appearances the former heavyweight champion looks to be in fine physical condition. At 37 years, the factor of age is a matter that seems to worry his friends more than Dempsey himself. "How about Bob Fitzsimmons? He won the championship at that age." This is Jack's retort to the skeptical.

Dempsey trained here for his bout in Stockton. It was his only appearance in the State prior to his leaving for a tour in the Midwest and East.

Outsider Sets Mark at Hialeah

13th Start Lucky for Backers; First Time in the Money.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 4 (A.P.).—What is believed to be a record place price was paid today when Joe Edwards' Baal ran record in the first race at Hialeah Park and returned $971.10 for $2. A similar priced show ticket returned $248.30.

If the 3-year-old had won, he would have paid $2,428.50 for $2. Twelve dollars was bet on the horse to place and $4 to show. He finished a length and a half back of Buoyant Days, the winner.

Although today's race was his thirteenth start, Baal had never finished closer to the money than fifth. More often he trailed the field. In today's mile race, he got off slowly but made up ground gradually and closed very fast through the stretch, although never able to menace the winner.

George D. Widener's gelding Panetian uncorked a brilliant effort to win the Long Key Handicap, 6-furlong feature this afternoon. The son of Galetian—Pan Maid ran the distance in new track record time of 1:10 2-5 to score by three lengths over Don Leon, the Western flash from the R. W. Collins stable. Helianthus was third, three parts of a length off Don Leon, while Back Log pulled up slightly lame in last place.

Panetian, reversing the decision over Don Leon, was one of the two outsiders and paid $15.40 for $2. Don Leon was the hot favorite, with Helianthus second choice. Panetian was perfectly ridden by Bobby Leischman and was much the best.

Martha D. Takes Feature At Havana.

Havana, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—The fourth race, feature of a program dedicated to claiming events at Oriental Park today went to Mrs. E. Denemark's Martha D. with J. Costello's Consummation second and the Lemar Stock Farm's Alcove third.

Martha D. dominated the running and ran the 5½ furlongs in the good time of 1:08 2-5. The winner paid 3 to 1 in the betting.

So many withdrawals were made in the fifth race that the race was declared off and no substitute was offered. There was no apparent reason for the wholesale scratching for there had been no overnight change in track conditions.

Springsteel Shows Class At New Orleans.

New Orleans, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—S. W. Labrot's 3-year-old brown gelding Springsteel today lived up to his name to win the Bayou Teche Purse at the Fair Grounds, feature race of an ordinary card. Well up in contention throughout, Springsteel took command at the head of the stretch and won by two lengths, with A. B. Leteller's Sazerac second.

The Daily Double paid $49.20 for $2 to holders of tickets on Open Hearth and Broad Axe, winners of the second and third races.

927 to 1 Is Record In American Mutuels

Wishing Ring set the American record for mutuel ticket pay-offs when he won at Latonia in 1912 at odds of 927 to 1, paying $1,856 in the $2 win mutuels.

The biggest pay-off ever recorded on a winner outside of the United States was in November, 1929, when odds of 3,100 to 1 were handed to Mrs. Ainsworth, wife of a Liverpool, England, physician, who had bet two shillings (50 cents) on Coole in a hurdle race. She received $1,705 for her 50-cent wager.

The previous world record was 3,037 to 1 paid when Robledo won a race at Shanghai, China, earlier in 1929.

—Hialeah Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

HIALEAH PARK, Miami, Fla., Feb. 4.—EVENING, George D. Widener's fast filly, which equaled the track record in defeating the stars at Hialeah Park last week in the Hialeah Highweight Handicap, should repeat in the Builders Handicap, which features the card tomorrw. Only four starters are listed for the race, at a mile. SUN MEMORY, winner last out over Bacciocco in 1:11 2-5, is rated the contender. CALF ROPER will have RIP VAN WINKLE to beat for show money. Neither of these horses has been racing in best form this winter.

EVENING, in her seven furlongs race referred to, ran the first six furlongs in 1:10 flat, below the track record, then going on to equal the mark for the full distance. She should have no difficulty in going the mile.

FIRST RACE—MAE SWEEP, at the weights, appears best. LOVE OFFERING, which beat her a nose the last time they met, takes up several pounds, and should be second. The difference in weight more than offsets the previous margin of a nose. SUN TEATIME seems best of the others, and should sideshow for third money.

SECOND RACE—LAVAAL is selected to win the 2-year-old race. He was second to Meany Wednesday and his victory should be easy in this dash. VENNIE H has shown a good race and is rated the contender. WHITE THORN, heavily backed in previous starts, likely will make up in this and is rated third. The field is unwieldly and several of the juveniles will be making their first start.

THIRD RACE—One more trial for THE HEATHEN. If he does not win tomorrow with light impost, he will be consistent, at least, in his very bad Florida form, but this is the easiest field in which he has been placed and maybe he will hold his speed to the end and win. He is far below his form in Maryland when Bud Stottler trained him. KNOWLTON is the form horse at present and will be favorite, but will not win if THE HEATHEN runs to old form. GENERAL A is on edge and won his first out at this track the other day. He should be in the money.

FOURTH RACE—PRINCE TOY'S last race was a good one, and he is selected. He ran second to Silvery Wednesday. CABILLIO is dangerous and should hold the place. CHICAGO GIRL ran a good race the other day, finishing second to Red Face, and may be third in this.

SIXTH RACE—TOMBEREAU is selected to beat BACCIOCCO and it will be a hard job for the J. D. Norris gelding, but he has won repeatedly and defeated Clean Play last out in fast time. BACCIOCCO is a standout for place and set the 6 furlongs record at Hialeah, which was lowered yesterday by Panetian. JAZ AGE has a chance for the top money and can not miss for third.

SEVENTH RACE—PUTTER is best in the seventh. She is improving, and was second to Fetish last time out, finishing in front of Fair Bill. PLAYBILL is the probable contender. He was third to Last Attempt a fortnight ago. MIKE CAREY has not found his stride, but is improving and should be in the money.

BUOYANT DAYS, in close pursuit of the pacemaker to the stretch turn, where he moved up stoutly and, easily disposing of the tiring MAKE SPEED, drew away in final furlong. BAAL finished with good courage. He was driving hard at end to stall off MANASSAS. MAKE SPEED broke fast and showed lot of early speed for six furlongs. He collapsed when challenged. SINGLE KAY, off slowly, raced on the outside most of the journey.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK LOVE, $3.30, $2.60, $2.50; FOUL TIP, $9.00, $4.60; LAST BID, $2.50.

DARK LOVE, a rapid beginner, quickly assumed command and held her opposition safe at all stages. She kept a straight course entire journey. FOUL TIP closed gamely under a drive and shook off BLUE DUSK last furlong. LAST BID, very fractious at the barrier, was finally taken to the extreme outside and got bad break from the stalls. NUN'S WAY broke well and showed speed first furlong, but was tiring.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 2:24½. Off at 2:26½. Winner, J. Edwards' br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SINGLE STAR, $6.10, $4.40, $3.50; ELLICE, $7.30, $6.80; BROOKSIE, $14.70.

SINGLE STAR stumbled just as the break came and dropped back. She worked her passage up on the outside and, closing fast in stretch run, outgamed ELLICE in final drive. Latter saved ground entering home stretch. She hung after disposing of SOBIEHA at furlong pole. BROOKSIE finished stoutly.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. Long Key Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:36½. Winner, George D. Widener's br. s. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PANETIAN, $15.40, $3.90, out; DON LEON, $2.40, out; HELIANTHUS, out.

PANETIAN forced a fast pace from the start, moved up in resolute fashion rounding the first turn and easily disposed of DON LEON in stretch run. DON LEON broke rapidly and raced under slight restraint for three furlongs and tired badly last furlong. HELIANTHUS was wearing down DON LEON at end. BACK LOG pulled up lame.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,300; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:23. Off at 4:24½. Winner, Belair Stud's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINSCEN, $3.10, $2.50, $2.30; ULUNIU, $4.00, $3.40; GAY BIRD, $2.90.

Malley took KINSCEN back off the early pace and waited until rounding the far turning when he moved up on the outside, fought it out with ULUNIU all through home stretch and was up in final strides. ULUNIU made a determined effort at top of home stretch, where he went to the front, but hung last sixteenth. GAY BIRD, a keen factor all the way, had a lot taken out of him racing down DANCING MACK to submission. WATERWAY, well in hand and in close quarters on back stretch, flattened out when McAuliffe called on him.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:52½. Winner, R. W. Collins' ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DISCOVERY, $7.30, $3.90, $2.50; IRON CZAR, $4.80, $3.30; SWEEPMAR, $2.70.

DISCOBOLUS scrambled into a long lead in early stages, but tired badly after going six furlongs and was driven hard all through home stretch to stall off IRON CZAR. Latter, slow to begin, moved up stoutly entering home stretch. He was gradually wearing the winner down. SWEEPMAR shook off FULL SWING in stretch run.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 5:20. Off at 5:23. Winner, Mapleton Stud's ch. c. LION HEARTED could not keep up with early pace, but closed ground steadily last quarter mile and was wearing winner down. TACK, always well up, tired under pressure through stretch. TOREALONG was badly outrun until last quarter mile, came with a determined rush in stretch and just failed to get up for show position. SCARLET BRIGADE finished well. TANTALIZING stopped after displaying fine speed for six furlongs.

U. S. BOBSLED IS SOCIAL SUCCESS

there were out of step with him. Thunberg skates against the clock only, and at Lake Placid the foreigners will have to do as the Americans do and skate against their opponents. Thunberg has had an unpleasant experience of the American style of skating. He raced Joe Moore in Madison Square Garden a few years ago and was a tail-Finn at all times.

I am told that the disrespect between the disappointed local bobsled crews of Lake Placid and the society crew is entirely mutual, and this suggests exciting possibilities, for the town is small and the places of social resort are few.

Eagan Fought Socially.

With the other members of the society crew I have no acquaintance, but I have met Mr. Eagan several times, and if it were possible to decide the precedence for the bobsled teams by fist-fighting I am sure he would be glad to do it that way. He began fighting socially in Denver as an amateur at a time when Jack Dempsey was a new champion, and one evening, when Dempsey happened through Denver, Mr. Eagan was elected to box him slightly in an exhibition.

In the course of the exhibition Mr. Eagan, who is a smiling fighter, thought, as so many other amateurs have thought when boxing champions, "it would be a great thing for my prestige if I were to sneak one over on this great champion and knock him for a series of widening loops." He thereupon let fly his best Meadow Brook Hunt, or Junior League, punch and missed, whereupon Dempsey brushed his chin with a left hook and grabbed him as he was about to fall. Mr. Dempsey waltzed Mr. Eagan around a few steps and brushed his chin again, also catching him again and waltzing him around. After brushing Mr. Eagan's chin a third time and waltzing him one more whirl, Mr. Dempsey leaned close to Mr. Eagan's ear and said firmly, "Now, be nice, will you?"

Became Member Of Tunney Set.

Mr. Eagan was still very fond of fighting, though, and once fought his way around the world as an amateur in the company of some aristocratic young English boxers.

After his experience with Dempsey, Mr. Eagan became a Yale boxer and an Olympic boxer, and when Gene Tunney was training in Chicago for his second fight with Dempsey he was a member of the Tunney set but by no means a sparring partner. Mr. Eagan was there as Tunney's social equal. In fact, he may have maintained a slight social bulge on Tunney, for he fought only for pleasure, and he had degrees from Yale and Oxford.

But this is all irrelevant. It is not customary to decide boxing championships on bobsleds nor bobsled championships with boxing gloves.

American U. Seeks Ninth Straight Win

Unbeaten Eagles Hosts to Elon Five; Bliss to Battle Strayers.

American University's unbeaten basket ball team goes gunning for its ninth straight victory tonight on its own floor. The opposition will be provided by Elon (N. C.) College, the game getting under way at 8:15 o'clock.

The successful Eagles returned to competition last Tuesday, following ten days of midyear examinations, but failed to display their best form though they turned back Randolph-Macon College. Their pass-work was spotty and they seemed to lack initiative, but, when threatened as they were twice during the game, they managed to summon enough reserve energy to gather a lead sufficient to earn the decision.

Little is known here of Elon and Coach Young therefore has warned his players to be ready for most anything. In practices of the last two days he has stressed speed, hoping that his men will get a flying start against whatever the North Carolinians may offer in the way of attack.

The only other local collegiate basket ball contest on the program tonight will be played at Silver Spring Armory, where Bliss meets Strayer in a Washington Conference clash. Bliss is leading the league at present with three victories and no defeats. Action starts at 8:30.

BENNING GIRLS WIN.

VERMONT VS. INGRAHAM.

The Vermont A. C. and the Ingraham fives will meet tonight at Langley at 8 o'clock. They are 130-pound teams.

SACRED HEART WINS.

Sacred Heart nosed out St. Paul's in an exciting basket ball game played on the former's court yesterday. The final score was 33-32. Hannon starred for the winners.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

LEWIS MOOD'S $6,000 limb of an apple tree is a bud-sport. The limb produced deep, solid red-all-over apples, which colored up early in August when the old-fashioned Delicious type of apples on the rest of the tree were still green.

When tests proved that trees grown from this original limb bore apples with the same red-all-over coloring habit, Mr. Mood sold the limb for $6,000, and the tree was inclosed in a strong cage.

Chipeta was the wife of a famous Ute Indian Chief, Ouray, who died in 1881. They were friendly to the early settlers in Colorado, and many lives were saved by their influence.

Chipeta died on an Indian reservation in Utah, but she was buried in an old Indian cemetery not far from Montrose, Colo. Recently she was honored by the Daughters of the American Revolution, who erected over her grave a full-sized tepee of concrete, one of the most unusual of memorials, and one of the most appropriate.

C. U. BOXERS FACE N. Y. CITY COLLEGE IN DEBUT TONIGHT

Gotham Team Reported Strong

De Pasquale Missing; Pyne in Debut as Light Heavy.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY, which has done more than any other institution to popularize collegiate boxing in the Capital area, will open its 1932 season tonight in the spacious Brookland gymnasium with a program of seven bouts between the Cardinals and the leather-pushers from New York City College. The first bout will commence at 8:30 o'clock.

Unbeaten in six matches last winter, the Cardinals, coached by Eddie Lafond, are confident of starting where they left off in 1931. The New Yorkers, however, will furnish sturdy opposition if past performances may be taken as indicative. C. C. N. Y. has won a majority of five matches already contested this season.

It is notable that this array does not include the Cardinals' most proficient boxer, Johnny De Pasquale, a featherweight. The hard-hitting, speedy little Italian has been unable to train properly for the debut on account of classroom work. He is expected to make an appearance later in the season.

Stines and Pyne are the chief dependables of the team as it lines up now. Lafond intends to enter them in the national intercollegiate tournament, which will be an Olympic tryout.

Admission to tonight's bouts will be granted only to specially invited guests, excepting members of the C. U. Athletic Association. Memberships in the association may be purchased for one night at a fee of $1 per person or for the entire season for $3.

Wilson Teachers Bow To Eastern Five, 41-26

Eastern High produced plenty of power yesterday at Eastern Gym. to upset the Wilson Teachers in easy style, 41 to 26, leading at all stages of the fray.

Red Summers, Wilson's lone threat, was the only losing player able to break through the Eastern defense for any material gain. He scored 16 points in all and directed play for his side.

Eastern played without Al Waters and Jack Bayliss, choice guards, who were absent from school. Eastern led, 21 to 11, at the half, led by Bernie Lieb, big center.

MIRACLES OF SPORTS. —By Robert Edgren

Notre Dame Signs Anderson for 1932

Continues as Head Coach; Schwartz and York Are Named to Staff.

Anderson was named senior coach last spring after the death of Knute Rockne and was assisted by Jack Chevigny, who resigned as junior coach this week. Under the new arrangement, the "senior" and "junior" coach designations were abolished.

Ring and Mat Card At Kensington Feb. 17

A boxing show will be staged by the Kensington Howitzer Company Wednesday, February 17, in the Kensington Armory, for the benefit of the company's athletic fund. A card of six boxing bouts and one wrestling exhibition has been arranged by Brooke Grubb, chairman of the committee.

The card follows: 112 pounds, George Rutt vs. Al Bruno; 135 pounds, Johnny Schutz vs. Angelo Bradelol; 160 pounds, Ernie Grissett vs. Cy Williams; 175 pounds, Johny Peruzzi vs. Johnny Myers; heavyweight, Jack Baxter vs. Sam Crielieski. In the wrestling match Bill Chapman, of Kensington, will try conclusions with Tom Long, of Leonardtown, Md.

Layton Puts Copulos Out of Cue Running

Chicago, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., ten-time title holder definitely eliminated Gus Copulos, Eugene, Oreg., in the world championship three-cushion billiard turnament. Layton triumphed, 50 to 37, in 38 innings.

Layton clicked off 16 points to 10 for Copulos in the first ten innings. He was leading by 30 to 20 in 19 innings, and by 39 to 21 in 27 innings. Here Copulos made his last stand, gathering 13 points in 3 innings to Layton's 2, reducing the margin to 34 to 41. From here on Layton ran away with the match.

Arthur Thurnblad, of Chicago, winner of the 1931 title, won his sixth victory in nine matches, taking the night match from Jake Schaefer, of San Francisco, 50 to 36, in 62 innings. The match was Schaeffer's last of the tournament and he finished with six victories and five defeats.

WEBB PICKS RING TEAM AT NAVY

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 4.—As the result of elimination bouts that had been in progress for the last three weeks, and culminated last night, "Spike" Webb, veteran boxing coach at the Naval Academy selected the mitt pushers who will represent the Naval Academy in the opening dual meet of the college season here Saturday night when Louisiana State University will furnish the opposition.

The selections follow: 115 pounds, A. T. Wright, Eldorado, Tex.; 125 pounds, H. L. Miller, Fairbanks, Alaska; 135 pounds, H. S. Fulmer, St. Louis, Mo.; 145 pounds, R. M. Lee, St. Petersburg, Fla.; 160 pounds, J. B. McNaughton, Charleroi, Pa.; 175 pounds, L. A. Arthur, New York City; unlimited weight, Robert P. Harbold, Washington, D. C.

Webb said tonight there is a possibility of big "Jim" Reedy, captain and guard of the 1932 football team, getting the call over Harbold. There is little to choose between them, he said. Harbold also is a football man. He was a close-running understudy to Magruder Tuttle at center last fall. He weighs close to 200 pounds and is tall and active. Reedy carries like poundage, but is of stockier build.

Little Experience On Team.

Webb, who has attained wonderful success in boxing with the Midshipmen, his teams having lost but one dual meet in twelve seasons of campaigning, this year is confronted with the most difficult task he has encountered, for of the selections only two are from last year's team, or have had more than average experience. However, all of his proteges are fast and aggressive and willing fighters, which have been outstanding characteristics of Midshipmen boxers. Harry Fulmer in the lightweight division, is rated the star of the team. He was the sensation in last year's intercollegiate circles, twice defeating "Doug" Crosby, intercollegiate champion, of Western Maryland, via the knockout route.

The team is without the services of its captain, John B. (Bert) Davis, middleweight, also a star last year, who administered the first defeat which Moran, Syracuse ace, had sustained in two years of fighting. Moran gained a decision verdict over Davis in a dual meet, Syracuse being the team to hang up the only victory over Navy in twelve years, but in the intercollegiate finals Davis took the measure of the Orange star.

5 Northern Nines Cancel G.U. Games

Lack of Traveling Funds Reduces Georgetown to 15 Contests.

Old Man Depression's far-reaching effects have eaten into the Georgetown University baseball schedule for 1932. Five Northern schools have canceled games with the Hilltop because of lack of funds for traveling.

Boston College, Harvard, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania and Vermont are the schools that have called off contests scheduled some time ago with Georgetown. Their action has reduced the Blue and Gray diamond program from 20 to 15 games and postponed the opening of the season from late March to early April.

Georgetown, however, will make its usual Northern trip late in the season. The full Hilltop schedule, as it stands now, has not as yet been announced.

Special to The Washington Post.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 4.—Staunton Military Academy cagers added another victory to their growing list by swamping the Emerson Institute team, of Washington, here today. The final count was 40 to 8.

The complete M. A. squad participated in the game, no combination experiencing any difficulty in holding the visitors in check.

At the end of the third quarter M. A. was leading 34 to 3, the visitors' scores coming in the first and fourth quarters only.

Billy Petrolle, 26, Embarks On Fourth Comeback in Ring

Fighting Dakotan Has Quit 3 Times After Beating Best Contenders; Won and Lost Against McLarnin, Berg, Mandell.

R. F. HENDPICKSON.

Count of Petrolle's comebacks was lost a long time ago, but each has shunted the two-fisted wrecker of many another's title hopes further up the main line track. He may be old and gray when he gets there, but Petrolle is convinced that, like wine, aging does him more good than harm.

Only 26, Despite Long Career.

He is 26 years old, and each January 10 finds a cake in his home in observance of his birthday.

Four different groups of fighters have had their generation of ascendancy in the nine years Petrolle has packed away in ring experience.

He has been the "front man" for several champions, removing challengers which save the titleholders time, energy and risks.

He has beaten and been beaten by Jimmie McLarnin, Jack (Kid) Berg and Sammy Mandell. He blasted the title hopes of the Chicagan, Ray Miller, and scored knockouts over Johnny Rocco and Johnny Adams when they were reckoned as title-winning prospects. He won a decision from Tony Canzoneri, but a title was not at stake.

Petrolle's greatest ring feud has been with King Tut of his own State, a rivalry which had its last outcropping in Petrolle's favor. A few weeks after being knocked out in 34 seconds in St. Paul by Tut, Petrolle in 1931 met his blond tormentor in Madison Square Garden and won by a knockout in the fourth round. Before that they had met four times with honors leaning toward Tut.

Petrolle got his first taste of fisticuffs around the railroad yards of Dilworth, Minn. He left his birthplace to join the classes for pugilists opened at Fargo, N. Dak., by Jack Hurley. The latter, a former fighter forced out of the ring by the war which left him with "trench feet," soon began turning Petrolle's talents into money.

For two years he met young prospects at fistic crossroads with knockouts earning him $200 a head. Then he ran into a better puncher one night and decided he would rather make his money some other way.

Ended Retirement By Beating Berg.

A repetition of the "retire and come back" act has gone on and on. In 1929 Petrolle quit the ring and determined to join Hurley, his close friend, in managerial activities. He came out of that retirement to triumph over Berg. Later he came out of another cloistered period to win from McLarnin. But when the latter evened the count last year, Petrolle again went into retreat.

Thrifty throughout his career, Petrolle no longer is hard pressed for money. But now that he doesn't need money, he is given the biggest purses he ever fought for and thrift has come to the front several times to left-hook that desire to quit for good.

"After all these years, I think I rate a title and that is what I am out to win this time as I never tried before," he explains. "I may be a veteran but Dempsey is ten years older."

Hitting the Head Pin

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON

THE latest version of the stirring scene from the play, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," commonly referred to as Eliza crossing the ice, will be enacted tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, when 46 bowlers congregate at the College Park alleys to roll the second block in the Suburban Sweepstakes.

Ray Huffman will play the part of Eliza, simply because he happens to be the one pursued. There are several candidates for the Simon Legree part and all will be given the opportunity of overtaking the fleeing fugitive. The remainder of the field will devote their time to portraying bloodhounds.

Eliza, or Ray Huffman, almost fell in, or to be more prudent, was almost overtaken in the first block rolled at Bethesda Saturday night. In fact, for a while Eliza was chasing her pursuers, but about the fourth game matters righted themselves and she made the drama more realistic by at least getting among the leaders. When she finally assumed her rightful position at the head of the chase, it seemed that she would certainly be overtaken, but just when all seemed lost, a big hunk of ice, disguised as a 194 game, came floating by and our heroine, or hero if you must, leaped aboard. At this time the "to be continued next week" sign was displayed.

Whether the nasty villains will succeed in capturing their prey remains to be seen. Sam Corcoran, Harry Naylor, Will Barrett and Hugh Crawley are very close to the leader, but a new crop of prospective winners is liable to crop up at College Park tomorrow night. George Isemann, J. Talbert, R. Houck, the Hiser brothers, Ray Parks and Sam Benson will bear watching.

An interesting program has been arranged for duckpin fans by Charlie Bell, of Convention Hall, for tomorrow. At 2 p. m. Margaret Miltner and Elsie Fischer, national women's doubles champions, will roll Helen Spencer and Mary Galloway, of Baltimore, and Louis Pantos and Jack Talbert will face Joe Pricci and Joe Harrison. At 8 p. m. the hall will assume an international aspect with the Greeks and Italians doing battle. Three singles matches and one doubles have been scheduled. Sam Del Vecchio, Italian junior champ, will meet Pete Glaneris, Greek junior title holder, Tony Santini will roll Louis Pantos and Joe Pricci will match wares with Nich Chaconas. The latter two on each side will participate in the doubles. There will be no team match.

Miss Ruedi's 282 set and 104 game carried off the top honors in the A. G. O. Ladies League at Columbia. A 1,289 set was credited to Mine Planters, who were evidently on the job, judging from their 2-1 win over Butchery. Although the latter failed to live up to its name it did cop the team game laurels with 453. Pursuit overtook the Pack Train and relieved it of three games, the Military Police pinched a couple of games from the Firing Squad, and Bombardment confused Signal Battalion enough to win the odd one.

Old Chief Sockem Hard Gray led the Indians into action in the Interior League at Columbia last night, and was quite successful, his team winning two from Disbursing. Gray rolled a set of 354 and game of 134 which took the individual laurels of the evening despite the fact that Brooks, of Disbursing, equalled the game effort. Disbursing's only win was scored on a 558 game. Pension rolled 1,529 to take the odd one from G. H. I. and Secretary was another odd-game winner, Land receiving the ace. Survey concluded the matches by winning two from Engravers.

Rolling in the Rosslyn Mixed Doubles League at the Rosslyn bowling alleys last night, Mrs. Helen D. Davis and Russell Spilman smashed the record for a three-game set, hanging up a new mark of 737. The former record, 724, was rolled by Lorraine Gulli and George Isemann at Greensboro, N. C., in April, 1930. Mrs. Davis rolled games of 93, 101 and 165. Her partner's games were 107, 143 and 128. Their opponents, Elizabeth Dugan and Johnnny Roper, lost all three games.

STOCK MARKET SAGS IN LIGHT TURNOVERS

New York, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—The stock market dozed peacefully today. A fairly even distribution of gains and losses was swung slightly off balance in favor of the down side during the last hour when rails became somewhat heavy, but trading was so dull that it could hardly be said a trend had been indicated.

Volume of 674,866 shares was the lightest of the year and the smallest since September 1 last. Professional activities contributed a very large percentage of the turnover, although neither bull nor bear seemed at all sure of his position. With the financial news budget bare of important happenings scheduled for the next few days traders felt it was best to wait and a considerable section of Wall street opinion held at such a policy could certainly do no harm.

The market generally traveled in a one-point range. Quotation-distributing machinery was idle almost as much as it was busy, and intervals of complete stagnation were numerous. A close scanning of financial news tickers for items that might have a bearing on market operations proved fruitless. Even gossip dwindled to a minimum.

Steel Is Unchanged.

United States Steel opened a point lower, made up the loss, reacted again and closed unchanged. Bethlehem, Westinghouse, North American, General Electric, American Tobacco "B" and Consolidated Gas also finished steady. General Motors, unaffected by the dividend cut sold ¼ lower and ¼ higher; it, too, closed unchanged. Du Pont, largest single stockholder in motors, firmed slightly in response to rather vague rumors that its own quarterly payment would not be altered at the next meeting.

American Telephone halved a one point loss before the close. Case, National Biscuit, American Can, Allied Chemical, Sears Roebuck, Radio and Anaconda were off moderately at the close. In the rails, Union Pacific, Santa Fe and Baltimore & Ohio lost a point.

Chartists may have found the carriers' action disconcerting, since that group's decline out of the last trading range might be construed as unfavorable. Nevertheless, there has been no increase in selling on this theoretically bearish signal.

Market Grows Duller.

The market has grown progressively duller. Many brokerage houses are willing to be cheerful, although they admit that the immediate industrial outlook is uninspiring.

Another week slips by without a change in the New York Reserve Bank's rediscount rate and without such fluctuations in the system's statement as would indicate an active change in credit policy. The current figures reflect month-end influences.

The $42,000,000 rise in circulation was attributed in part to similar causes, although the gain was $10,000,000 larger than occurred a year ago. Banks disliked to believe that hoarding, on which subject President Hoover and other prominent administration officials have spoken plainly, was again increasing. It has been pointed out several times that the closing of banks tends to bring an expansion in the amount of currency in use not only because suspensions deprive communities of banking facilities but also because they impair confidence in localities thus afflicted.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Reporting gains during 1931 in spite of general adverse business conditions, the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, founded February 1, 1843, and said to be the first company in America to operate on the legal reserve mutual plan of life insurance, shows, in its annual report issued yesterday, total income for the year of $234,925,900. The total of disbursements was $183,272,515, the income exceeding the outgo by $51,653,385.

The admitted assets of the company, with local offices, increased during the year $54,039,556, the assets on December 31, 1931, totaling $1,106,236,049.

During 1931 the company placed $29,612,714 in first mortgage loans and invested $24,857,785 in bonds and stocks. On December 31, 1931, excluding policy loans and real estate, the company owned and held investments in the sum of $855,107,556, book value, with an average yield of 4.83 per cent. The average earning rate in 1931 for the $301,931,004 which the company had outstanding in first mortgages on December 31 was 5.30 per cent.

Company's Reserve Grows.

After setting aside $43,175,689 for cash dividends payable in 1932, the company's contingency reserve (surplus) was $63,030,590, an increase of $1,662,386 over 1930.

The contingency reserve and the allotment for cash dividends in 1932 aggregate $106,206,279, this total of course representing strength in addition to the reserves set aside under the legal requirements.

An index of the extent to which the public has benefited by lower bread prices during the past year is given by the report to stockholders of the Continental Baking Corporation, made yesterday by M. Lee Marshall, chairman of the board. Through its operation of the Corby and Havenner plants in Washington, the Continental is one of the Capital's largest industries.

Reductions in Prices.

Reductions in prices by the Continental amounted for 1931 to $4,624,000. Of this reduced cost to consumers, $2,846,000 was represented by lower flour costs, leaving net economies passed along to the public of $1,778,000 above the saving in the principal raw material. This showing, in the face of generally less favorable conditions than existed in 1930, Mr. Marshall attributes to the fact that advertising activities were continued with undiminished vigor through the year and that while savings in costs were promptly reflected in the price to consumers there was no attempt to reduce prices at the sacrifice of quality.

During the year $1,000,000 in subsidiary bonds were called, resulting in a saving of $60,000 annual interest.

This leaves a total funded debt of subsidiaries of $2,161,302.32, as compared with $8,125,779.64 at the end of 1925. During the year 28.345 shares of 8 per cent preferred stock were canceled, with resultant savings in dividend requirements.

Upkeep for Year.

Provision for depreciation amounted to $1,700,000 in excess of the sum required for necessary additions to property. Upkeep, repairs and improvements for the year amounted to approximately $950,000. Cash and Government securities increased approximately $2,000,000 and the good will item was reduced by nearly $500,000.

The Guaranty Investment Co., of Charleston, W. Va., has opened an office in Suite 738, Woodward Building, in charge of Lieut. Col. Henry S. Merrick, who recently completed a four-year detail in the Militia Bureau of the War Department.

The company is organized under the strict West Virginia laws governing corporations of this character and writes a guaranteed installment annuity contract which furnishes an attractive and safe method of saving with the maximum return consistent with absolute security.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Feb. 4 (A.P.).—While the forthcoming annual report of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey is expected to show a material decrease in net earnings, owing to the low prices received for its products last year, it is understood that the cash position of the company will show increased strength. At the end of 1930 the company had $46,657,382 cash and $179,168,907 in marketable securities.

Wall street expects the annual report of Best & Co. to make a somewhat more favorable showing than the general run of department store statements. Latest estimates place the 1931 net profits at equal to about $3.25 a share, compared with $4.15 a share in 1930.

After analyzing the estimated wage savings of the leading railroads brokers specializing in rail securities reached the conclusion that the carriers' position will be materially eased. It is not generally believed, however, that the reduced wage bills will enable roads which suspended dividends to resume distributions in the near future, unless traffic shows real improvement.

C. Hascall Bliss has been elected a director of the Nash Motors Co., succeeding Thomas M. Kearney.

Sales of the S. S. Kresge Co. for January totaled $8,845,394, compared with $9,284,055 in 1931, a decrease of 9.9 per cent. At the end of January the company had 713 stores.

The New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange will remain closed on February 13, extending the Lincoln's Birthday holiday from Friday to Monday.

Gossip to the effect that American meat packers would benefit from the Japanese-Chinese situation is not credited in well informed quarters, where it is understood that the meat packers' trade with the Orient is negligible.

Dow, Jones & Co. say it is likely that the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. will declare the regular $1 quarterly dividend at the February meeting in spite of the fact that the company will experience a considerable loss in income this year through the reduction in the General Motors dividend. The expectation of the regular dividend is based on the fact that du Pont's 1931 income exceeded its dividend by 29 cents a share. Du Pont owns 9,981,220 shares of General Motors.

"THE BARON OF GENESEO"
JAMES W. WADSWORTH, SR.

FEBRUARY 5, 1907.

The first great national display of art at the Corcoran Art Gallery will open today. Money has not been spared to make the first great exhibition here an outstanding success.

The defense in the Thaw case was thrown into disorder when the defense counsel made public the fact that they are not at all in agreement as to the best way of conducting the case and that each of the three wanted to be chief counsel and have his way.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE MEDICAL SPECIALIST.

Scene: The offices of one of those modern big city high-priced specialists. The reception room is crowded with patients. A secretary-nurse receives each patient.

Nurse (to patient who has just entered)—Have you an appointment?

Patient (smilingly)—Yes. I'm a regular patient.

Nurse (not recalling him, although he has been coming for six weeks regularly at the same hour)—What was the name?

Patient—Blotz—Phineas Z. Blotz.

Patient (somewhat annoyed)—Is that a complaint or merely an observation?

* * * *

Nurse (suddenly finding the card)—Oh, here it is. I had you down as Blotz Z. Phineas.

Patient—No matter, as long as it doesn't affect the diagnosis or treatment.

* * * *

(He sits and reads the back numbers of dull magazines for about an hour while sixteen patients are received by the doctor, nine of whom he is sure came in after he did.)

Patient—Blotz was the name.

Patient—Blotz is the name.

Doctor (making another attempt to recall the facts from the index card)—Oh, no, I remember now. You had a stiffness in the ankles. Did those baths do any good?

Patient—It was my finger joints, if I am not mistaken. I had no baths.

Doctor (apologetically) — You couldn't be mistaken, Mr. Nott?

Doctor—Let me see the hand. (He takes the left hand.)

Patient—It was the other hand, doctor.

Doctor—Are you sure?

Patient (somewhat despairingly)—No. You've got me confused, too, I'm afraid.

Doctor—It's curious, but I have a distinct impression you complained of pains in your big toe. Wasn't there something said about the big toe?

Patient—Not by me.

Doctor—You were here once before, were you not?

Patient—This is my tenth visit.

Doctor (a little embarrassed)—Yes, of course. I have so many patients, you see, that it's hard to remember.

Patient—I noticed that.

Doctor (after having his mind further distracted by a call on the telephone)—Now, then, Mr. Watts, sit down in this chair under the light and let me take a good look at that spot on your head.

Patient—What spot on my head? And the name is Blotz!

Doctor—There was a spot on your head, wasn't there?

Patient (angrily)—Now listen.

Doctor—Oh, no. . . . That must have been the previous patient, or maybe it's the one after you who had the spot on his head. I remember now. Your trouble was a whirring in the left ear.

* * * *

Patient—For what?

White-coated assistant—The heart pictures.

THE CONSPIRATORS, GADARXTL AND KAXLA, HAD TAKEN ME ABOARD A TINY SPINNER SHIP, IN WHICH THEY HOPED TO ESCAPE FROM DIONE, FOURTH MOON OF SATURN, ALTHOUGH THE AXIAL TUNNEL OF THE SATELLITE WAS FILLED WITH HUER'S ROCKET CRUISERS — I OWED MY LIFE ONLY TO THE FACT THAT THEY WANTED ME AS A HOSTAGE.
THE LITTLE CRAFT WAS DRIVEN BY A ROCKET BLAST - "PINWHEEL" ROCKETS WOULD SET IT SPINNING, WHEN OUT IN SPACE, TO CREATE CENTRIFUGAL FORCE TO ACT AS GRAVITY - THUS, SINCE "DOWN" WAS ALWAYS TOWARD THE INSIDE OF THE HULL, THE CREW WERE FREQUENTLY UPSIDE DOWN TO EACH OTHER.

IN THE MUNICIPAL COURT OF THE District of Columbia. Dr. John J. Laroche, Charleston, S. C., Plaintiff, vs. Emil Greene, Charleston, S. C., Defendant. No. 241611. The object of this suit is to recover the sum of three hundred ($300) dollars, with interests and costs, for professional medical services rendered to the minor daughter of the defendant at the special instance and request of the defendant, and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 2d day of February, A. D. 1932, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays after the date of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. National Photo.

An idea of the rise in valuation of the property in that section of the city from that date to the present may be had by comparing the cost of the land. In 1864 the property was sold for 4 cents per square foot, and today it is assessed at over $10 per square foot.

The house was leased to Levi Z. Leiter, of Chicago, in 1883, for five years, at an annual rental of $11,000. This was the highest rental ever paid in Washington up to that time. In 1891 Mr. Leiter erected and occupied a home at Dupont Circle and the Blaine mansion was sold to the Weatinghouse family, of Pittsburgh, and they lived there for many years.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, finally got his Government pay-cut bills referred to a committee yesterday.

The three bills were referred to the civil service committee, of which Senator Porter Dale (Republican), of Vermont, is chairman, despite the objection voiced by the senator from Idaho.

Senator Borah objected that Senator Dale already was publicly on record as opposed to cutting Government salaries. Senator Dale said that he hadn't learned that Senate rules had been changed so that bills must be referred to committees favorably disposed to their support. Despite his opposition to cutting Government salaries, Senator Dale said, Senator Borah could rest assured that the committee would make a quick report, even if it were an adverse one.

Brookhart Promises Fight.

Senator Brookhart (Republican), of Iowa, however, upset the calculations of Senator Dale and the Borah pay-slashing measures will not be reported today. When Senator Dale sat down, it is understood, Senator Brookhart walked over and suggested that he had promised too much; that so far as he, Brookhart, was concerned, he intended to delay the measures in committee, on the floor.

The Iowan's declaration probably warmed the cockles of the Vermonter's heart, but having promised to give an immediate committee report on the measures, Senator Dale offered Senator Borah the privilege of asking that the bills be taken from his committee and referred to another committee.

Senator Borah has been trying for days to get his bills referred to one or another committee and none of the committees which he has suggested as proper has been willing to accept them. It is probably that was the reason that the Idaho senator decided to leave the bills where they were and agreed with Senator Dale that the wise course would be to call a committee meeting tomorrow morning to consider them.

Disapproval Predicted.

The civil service committee is expected to make a declaration against the principle of pay slashing. The personnel of the committee comprises some of the richest men in the Senate. The Republican members include Chairman Dale, Senators James Couzens, of Michigan; Brookhart; Hamilton F. Kean, of New Jersey; Frederic C. Walcott, of Connecticut, and Wallace H. White, of Maine; Democrats: Senators Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee; Walter F. George, of Georgia; William J. Bulow, of South Dakota, and M. M. Logan, of Kentucky.

Senator Borah's continued agitation for slashing Government salaries came at a time when Government workers throughout the country were beginning to draw a sigh of relief, in the belief that the pressure upon them had been at least temporarily eased. It had been believed that the declaration of the House that the substantive law should be disregarded and that there should be no promotions within grades, even within the limitations of appropriations, in the next fiscal year, would be adequate to satisfy those who were advocating Government economy by way of cutting Government pay envelopes.

House Leaders Oppose Slashes.

House leaders have definitely set their faces against proposals to slash Government salaries. They are willing to concede that Government expenses should be cut down, but they are, at this time, in the position of challenging farmers, city taxpayers and whatever other special groups with the question: which service now given you by the Federal Government are you willing to have cut off?

The determination of Senator Borah to force his pay slashing measures to consideration on the Senate floor is liable to upset the apple cart of the Government workers. Able to point to obvious iniquities on the Government pay roll, advocates of pay slashing, led by Senator Borah, may succeed in initiating a movement to begin a slashing at the top which shall extend down the line to the most minor and ill-paid workers in the service of the Nation. That is the fear of leaders of Government workers who urge that initiation of pay-slashing legislation at this time, in the guise of economy, will do injustice.

Fears Harm of Precedent.

Representative Lamar Jeffers (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the House civil service committee, said yesterday that he did not expect leaders of the employes to do much more than urge the principle behind the various measures which have been introduced providing for a shorter work week, retirement legislation and other measures to improve working conditions in the Government service.

Representative Jeffers said that he was opposed to cutting Government salaries, adding that a pay-slashing precedent set by the Government would do considerably more harm than good. Outside pressure, he said, may eventually drive Congress to the expedient.

Should Senator Borah force the question to an issue, there are several members of both House and Senate who are prepared to assault the Wood-Borah pay-slashing proposal as the expression of the determination of the same banking interests which have been attacked in both chambers as seeking to force pay cuts throughout the country.

False-Arrest Suit Asks Damages of $25,000

Attorneys F. J. Donohue and Thomas E. Lodge, for Hinton, asserted that Hunter caused Hinton to be arrested on a charge that was subsequently ignored by the grand jury.

HOUSE IS UNROOFED; WIND FELLS TREES

Telephone Wires Reported Down in Maryland and Virginia.

High winds, reaching a velocity of 40 miles and more an hour, last night created havoc with trees and shrubs and tore the roof off one Washington home. Telephone lines were reported down between here and neighboring States.

A low pressure area in central New York is the center of the present disturbance, the Weather Bureau reported. Fair and colder weather with slowly rising temperature toward nightfall has been predicted for today.

Telephone lines between here and Atlanta, Ga., are being hastily repaired by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. Lines to Cumberland, Md., and Covington, Va., were also reported down earlier in the evening.

Mrs. I. Miller, 923 Second street northeast, received slight injuries when she and her husband climbed through a trap door to the roof of their home after the wind had moved the roof of the two-story brick dwelling.

The Fire Department succeeded in securing the roof against further damage. Mrs. Miller was thrown to the sloping surface of the roof by a strong gust of wind, but held on until help reached her. She suffered injuries to both knees and a laceration of the forehead.

Jack T. Ward, of Gaithersburg, Md., was cut about the face and head when his car skidded on wet pavement near Laytonsville, Md., and struck a telephone pole. His companions, Arthur C. Ward and Jack Ryan, also of Gaithersburg, escaped without injury.

Two stately old trees that were standing when the youthful George Washington marched by with the ill-fated Braddock expedition succumbed to the elements and plunged half of Rockville, Md., into darkness for nearly all of the night. Another old tree fell and disrupted telephone service in the Travilah section, beyond Rockville.

Arrests on L Tags Will Be Deferred

Police Await Results of Test Cases Covering Hotel Taxis.

No further arrests will be made of L tag taxicab operators who continue to park in front of downtown hotels pending a decision by the Police Court on test cases, Inspector E. W. Brown, of the Traffic Bureau, said yesterday.

Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, this week argued one of the test cases in which a Black & White & Yellow Taxicab Co. driver is charged with loitering, and next Tuesday he will argue another of the test cases, in which a driver of an L cab is charged with operating with improper license plates.

The Public Utilities Commission, which is seeking to break up the hotel franchise business, meanwhile will mark time. It was learned yesterday that the Mayflower Taxicab & Sightseeing Co. has renewed all of its L tags and is continuing to park its cars along Connecticut avenue in front of the Mayflower despite the ruling of the commission. The Black & White & Yellow Co. is more cautious than formerly, but continues to keep a few cabs available at the exits of the Willard and the Washington Hotels.

Ingersoll Monument Is Proposed in Bill

The memorial would be set up by the Robert Ingersoll Monument Association on a site agreed on with the advice and consent of the National Park and Planning Commission, under the terms of Senator Copeland's bill.

Senator Simeon D. Fess (Republican), Ohio, offered a bill to erect a monument in commemoration of the opening of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, on a site that would also be passed upon by the National Park and Planning Commission.

COMMITTEE TO GIVE WORK TO 100 MORE

Will Bring Number to 2,200; Rainy Weather Presents New Problem.

The District committee on employment is prepared to provide work for an additional 100 men each week as soon as the weather permits the workmen to return to their jobs, Paul L. Benjamin, executive secretary, announced yesterday.

The men will be divided between the forces working for the District Engineer Department and the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks, and will bring the total employed to 2,200 or 1,100 each week.

Yesterday's third consecutive day of rain presented a new problem to the committee, as it had previously decided to pay the men when the weather permitted their working for only two consecutive days. Now the officials are deliberating whether to extend the time to three days or more.

Howard University yesterday informed Mr. Benjamin it had requested that 40 per cent of the receipts of a basket ball game scheduled in New York with the College of the City of New York be donated to the District committee on employment.

"May we congratulate you upon placing some of our skilled women and men in positions where they are able to carry out the work for which they are trained," said a letter from John H. Burr, of Howard University.

Fire Engine Is in Crash While Answering Alarm

A fire engine attached to No. 9 Truck Co. was slightly damaged last night when it was in collision with another machine at Sixteenth and U streets northwest, while answering an alarm.

An automobile, operated by R. S. Blanco, of 749 Irving street northwest, collided with the truck, which was driven by Private James W. Laughlin. Only slight damage was done to both vehicles, and the engine continued to the fire at 1841 Sixteenth street. The blaze, a chimney fire, was quickly extinguished.

Gas Co.'s Time Extended for Report.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday complied with a request of the Washington Gas Light Co. and extended from February 1 until June the time allowed for submission of the preliminary report on the company's valuation now being made.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL APPROACH FAVORED

Senate District Committee Approves Proposal to Close Water Street.

In line with creating a more beautiful approach to the Lincoln Memorial the streets and avenues subcommittee of the Senate District committee yesterday approved a resolution authorizing the District Commissioners to close Water street between Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets.

The closing of this street will fit in with the program of the National Park and Planning Commission for treatment of the area north of the memorial. The resolution also proposes a transferring of land to the American Pharmaceutical Association which will erect a building to harmonize with the plan of the commission.

Senator Otis F. Glenn's subcommittee also approved a resolution to name the Sixteenth street entrance to Washington after the late Montgomery Blair, Postmaster General under Lincoln.

"Montgomery Blair Portal," was the name prescribed in the resolution. It was sponsored by Senators Phillips Lee Goldsborough (Republican), of Maryland, and Hiram Bingham (Republican), of Connecticut. The name would apply to Sixteenth street and adjacent park land where North Portal drive and Eastern avenue meet at the District line.

Senator Arthur Capper's bill to incorporate credit unions in the District may come to a vote at the meeting this afternoon. The District Bankers' Association is opposing the measure, holding the unions would compete with local financial institutions. Senator Capper introduced the bill as a relief measure. The unions set up would be cooperative societies to loan money to members at reasonable rates.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, will call up his bill to increase the regulatory powers of the District Commissioners, relieving Congress of many of its more routine burdens.

$25,000 Bonds Hold Two in Shooting Case

Two $25,000 bonds were set by Police Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday when two colored men, Carl E. Smith and James Gray, were brought before him for a preliminary hearing on charges that they shot Israel Fenkelson, 500 Twelfth street northeast, in an alleged attempted holdup January 26.

Fenkelson was seriously injured by the bullet. Police informed Judge McMahon that the filing of five more serious charges against the pair was probable.

SCOPE OF PROPOSED TRACTION COMBINE STIRS HOUSE FIGHT

REPLY SLATED TUESDAY BY KEECH AND CLAYTON

Will Get Chance to Answer Charge of Revamping Stand on Program.

Hearings on the new traction merger bill yesterday narrowed down to a fight over whether the consolidated company may remain in the sightseeing business or extend its operations to taxis, if it wants to do so.

President William F. Ham of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. opposed restricting the company's activities to street car and motor bus operation. However, he told the House utilities committee his company does not contemplate operation of taxicabs.

Owners and counsel for local sightseeing companies appeared in a body to demand exclusion of traction companies from competing with them. Many declared their trade has suffered serious losses since the railway lines started chartering buses to sightseeing parties.

Cites Distinction.

President John H. Hanna of the Capital Traction Co. drew distinction between the "chartered bus" business and the sightseeing business. He said the former has increased from a $95 revenue in 1925 to $105,000 in 1931, and profits from this help to overcome losses from the regular bus service.

Conrad H. Syme, appearing for the Blue & Gray Lines, and Laurence Gassenheimer, president of the Green Line Co., urged amendment of the merger act to bar the traction lines from competing with the sightseeing companies. James J. Grace testified he was driven out of business as an independent sightseeing bus operator by traction competition.

Mr. Ham's objection to barring the consolidated company from the operation of taxis, followed an amendment offered by Chairman Mason M. Patrick, of the Public Utilities Commission, striking out "other forms of transportation" in the opening clause of the bill.

Maj. Gen. Patrick offered other amendments, including one to stop the merged company from appealing from any reasonable fare rate for school children fixed by the Public Utilities Commission.

To Answer Charges.

Appearing for the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railway, Thomas P. Littlepage suggested an amendment giving the Public Utilities Commission authority to review existing contracts for the use of Washington Railway & Electric tracks, under which 10 cents a passenger is paid by the former concern. Washington Railway & Electric Co. contends the amendment has no bearing on the merger legislation.

People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech and William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, will be given a chance to reply to Maj. Gen. Patrick's charges that their merger demands this year and last were at variance, Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The Senate District committee also will continue merger hearings next week.

Representative Loring M. Black, jr. (Democrat), New York, chairman of the subcommittee, received word from Corporation Counsel W. W. Bride that the District Commissioners will not report on the merger bill until the Budget Bureau has passed on the project. Mr. Bride asked that a committee report be held up until the Commissioners can make known their views.

Chevy Chase Man Auto Show Winner

Last night's gift automobile at the Auto Show went to Granville Y. Custer, of 6411 Fulton street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Mr. Custer was not present when his good fortune was announced, but officials notified him by telephone. He is an examiner at the Patent Office. The car he won is a four-door Dodge sedan.

Despite unfavorable weather, 5,325 persons visited the show at the Washington Auditorium. This was 25 per cent over the figure for Thursday of last year's exhibit. Tonight's prize car will be a Chrysler sedan.

Census Survey Gives Proof Effects of Slump Light Here

547 Industries Covered in Study Which Reveals $15,512,711 in Wages Paid to 9,752 Employes; Few, If Any, Concerns Forced Out of Business.

Further facts to support the contention that Washington has suffered less from the depression than other cities were given yesterday in the biennial census of manufactures in the District compiled by the Census Bureau. Although the census was taken in 1929, it is believed to be a fairly accurate barometer of conditions in the Capital at the present time as few, if any, concerns have suspended business because of hard times, according to reports.

The number of industries given in the census is 547, representing a variety of trades, ranging from the making of awnings and mattresses to surgical and orthopedic instruments, including artificial limbs. These industries paid $9,936,418 in salaries to 4,250 officers and salaried employes. This excludes 37 salaried officers and employes of central administrative offices with salaries aggregating $136,347. A central administrative office, as the term is used for census purposes, is an office which operates two or more manufacturing plants, one or more of which are located outside the city in which the administrative office is located.

Manufacturers' profits can not be calculated from the census figures because no data are collected for certain expense items, such as interest on investment, rent, depreciation, taxes, insurance and advertising.

The value of products produced by the manufacturers aggregates $88,972,885, according to the report. The value added by manufacture is given as $52,772,815. By this is meant the value of products minus the cost of materials, containers for products, fuel and purchased electric energy. The cost of materials, containers, &c., is estimated at $36,200,070.

Leading the industries in size of plants and volume of products are bread and bakery producers, printing, publishing book and job concerns and printing and publishing, newspaper and periodical concerns. Bakeries have the largest number of establishments—100.

Printing and publishing houses have the largest number of employes, 2,645, and consequently lead in the other fields. These organizations, 98 in all, have 1,338 wage earners, to whom $2,747,454 is paid, and 2,645 salaried officers and employes, who receive $5,399,341. The value of their products amounts to $23,491,505.

MERCHANTS' GROUP HOLDS CELEBRATION

With about 300 in attendance, the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association held its seventh annual celebration last night with a dinner dance, entertainment and brief speaking program at the Amsterdam Hotel. The principal speakers were Representative Loring M. Black, of New York, and Col. George R. Laird, well known lecturer.

Representative Black, who is a member of the House District committee, created considerable amusement with a rapid-fire, epigrammatic comment on the day's news. He compared China with the District in the sense that foreigners treat the Far East country as Congress does Washington, only China fares better because she can change her government, he asserted.

The District needs the interest of men in Congress who will treat it like a big city and not as if it were a small town, he said. He recommended prescription of some Tammany Hall tonic, and declared he intended to try playing the part of doctor in this treatment. Representative Black referred to citizens organizations as filling the gap left by the absence of political machinery in the District, and as being invaluable to Congress in furnishing information about the Capital and its needs.

Col. Laird made a humorous talk in which he scored persons of wealth who tour abroad and who have never been to Washington. "Any one who has not been to the National Capital has not been anywhere," he averred.

William F Dismer, president of the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association, presided. S. K. MacDonald was chairman of the dinner committee. Guests included District officials and heads of citizens organizations. Entertainment was furnished by the Hudlow Sisters, Granville Leaf, Bernardi Sisters, Billy Laja, Dorothy Skinner, Vernon Slaughter, and by Tommy Morarre's National Hawaiians.

A suit for $10,000 damages was filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Foster E. Bendure, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Agnes Brady, whose death forms the basis for the suit.

Through Attorney Leonard A. Block, the administrator claimed that Mrs. Brady received injuries that caused her death when a hearse belonging to Martin W. Hysong, 1300 N street northwest, who is named the defendant, collided with an automobile in which she was riding in Anacostia December 22.

60 FINISH COURSES IN STRAYER COLLEGE

Pointing out the value of a vocational education and urging the graduates to have faith in the future of America, Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, emphasized the qualities necessary for business success in the commencement address delivered at the mid-year graduation exercises of Strayer College, which were held last night in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

In commenting on the depression existing throughout the country, the Pennsylvania senator discussed the machine and the problems of unemployment that have resulted from its introduction, and added that the constantly increasing number of women in employment also added further to the problem.

Pinckney J. Harman, director of Strayer College, presided ... the exercises and introduced Senator Davis to the audience. Edmond S. Donoho, president, awarded the diplomas, and then conferred the bachelor of commercial science degrees upon the graduates of Strayer College of Accountancy.

Nellie McLendon, a graduate of Central High School, gave the valedictory, and Electa Tassin, a graduate of Georgetown Visitation Convent, gave the address of welcome as president of the graduating class. The Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, of the First Congregational Church, pronounced both the invocation and benediction.

A special reception committee composed of D. J. Wiltrout, Ismaro Torruella, Charles Claggett and John Corderman had charge of the detailed arrangements of the evening which were planned by A. W. Heinmiller, E. G. Purvis and P. E. Sackett, of the college executive staff.

CANVASS BY VOLUNTEER WORKERS IS PROPOSED

House Bill to Break Up Bid Peddling to Be Urged; Liens Discussed.

Development of a sweeping plan to create work for the unemployed of Washington was discussed last night at a meeting of members of the Building Trades Employers Association at the Willard Hotel. The plan will be as broad as the city and the cooperation of all organizations and citizens will be sought in its furtherance.

It will follow generally the lines of the "Muncie plan," which had its inception in Muncie, Ind., and features of which have been adopted by the American Legion, the American Federation of Labor and the American Advertising Association in similar objectives.

Its chief executive feature is a house-to-house canvass by volunteer workers ascertaining what painting, repair or construction is needed and securing tenants' or owners' consents to performance of this work by unemployed labor.

Will Fight Bid Peddling.

The association, it was indicated, will support House Bill 4680, designed to break the practice of "bid peddling" in connection with Federal construction. This legislation provides that contracts in excess of $5,000 for Federal construction, alteration or repair work be awarded only to bidders whose bids are accompanied by statements with names and addresses of subcontractors, material and supply men, whose services they intend to use. Such contracts also contain provisions for payment by contractors of liquidated damages for failure to utilize men named.

Discussing the present lien law of the District of Columbia, which he described as of little or no real value, Frederick J. Rice, general counsel of the association, suggested that until a sufficiently forceful lien law was enacted for the country, conditions be written into various contracts accomplishing what the foregoing was designed to do. He offered to prepare a clause for every contract entered into by association members to protect them when their work is done.

Representative E. W. Goss, of Connecticut, sponsor of the legislation designed to eliminate "bid peddling," discussed reasons why such preventive measures were necessary, and John Colpoys, local labor leader, and E. J. Murphy, president of the Buy-in-Washington Council, predicted success for the campaign against unemployment.

Fairness, High Standards Urged.

President E. A. Rule of the association, in his inaugural address, urged a fight for fairness and maintenance of high standards in construction on the part of members of the association.

Executive Secretary Charles J. Columbus, of the association, reported that President Rule has named a new personnel for the cooperative committee of the new year. This committee, of which E. H. Rosengarten is chairman, has to do with all manner of relations between members as well as arbitration. This committee therefore includes the jurisdictional board of award of the association, whose members in turn sit with an equal number, three for each side, from the Washington Building Trades Council.

This joint committee has been quite successful in the adjudication of jurisdictional disputes, and it is the ambition of both sides that this work shall be amplified. The personnel of the panel for the work of the cooperative committee, as well as that of the jurisdictional board of award, includes the following: Mr. Rosengarten, chairman; Robert J. Barrett, D. C. Butcher, Merle Cain, Charles W. Easterday, Harry C. Lauder, J. F. Murtaugh, Logan Pingree, J. H. Robinson, Edward Stevens, W. A. Thomas and Max Walten.

House Office Trio Routed by Smoke

There was a fire at the Capitol yesterday—in the fireplace in the office of Representative Daniel Garrett, of Texas.

However legitimate a place the aforementioned fireplace may be for a warming blaze on a chill morning, the laying of a cheery fire there by Representative Garrett's office personnel resulted in a call for fire apparatus and a day's sensation in the Capitol building.

The fireplace had not been used for many years until yesterday when the three women workers in the Texas representative's office decided to build a fire. They did so. However, they neglected to turn on an electric motor which deflects the accruing smoke to the chimney flue. Heavy clouds of smoke filled the room and poured out into the corridors.

Somebody pulled a fire alarm. Crowds gathered. Police came. The fire was quenched temporarily and the error of the young women explained. Representative Garrett was sick at home.

Coroner's Jury Holds Driver of Death Auto

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered Sinclair B. Fowler, 38 years old, of 1540 Seventeenth street northwest, held for action of the grand jury in connection with the death of a street railway switchman, who died Tuesday after being struck by Fowler's car.

The switchman, John Saunders, 38 years old, of 712 I street northwest, was raising the overhead trolley of a street car at the plow pit on Wisconsin avenue near P street northwest, when Fowler's machine crashed into the car, pinning Saunders between the two vehicles. He died an hour later after physicians at Georgetown Hospital had amputated both his legs in an effort to save his life.

Rover Describes Gamblers As "Too Yellow to Steal"

United States Attorney Leo A. Rover did not mince words yesterday when he addressed the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel on local gambling racketeers. In describing the steel-barred gaming houses of the city, the prosecutor said: "Around these places are found men too lazy to beg, too yellow to steal, and too proud to work."

He spoke of recent activities against gaming and against certain magazines. "Every dollar that goes to a gambler," Mr. Rover said, "is a dollar gone from some legitimate business." He described the magazines upon which action had been taken as the sort "that I would not want my children to see."

The club was congratulated by the district attorney on its program of presenting each year Cosmopolitan distinguished service medal to that person who has performed the greatest civic enterprise for his community during the year. He declared that too many persons are ready to disparage those in public office, and said the club's action is a step toward counteracting such gossip.

Thomas J. Groome, chairman of the committee in charge of the club's next "stag night," announced that it would be held on February 25.

13 Autoists Are Accused On 'Dead Car Tag' Charge

Failure to provide their automobiles with 1932 license tags yesterday sent ten persons into Traffic Court on charges of not having the proper tags. Three others forfeited collateral.

Included in the list were six drivers of the Alexandria-Washington Bus Co., who paid fines of $3 each. The drivers were stopped at Tenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest when traffic policemen noticed 1931 tags were on the vehicles.

The drivers are James A. Taylor, Anthony Diaz, Laurence T. Morris, Cecil T. Marlow, Harry H. Heberlig and R. L. Turner. Four drivers of personal cars were released on personal bonds. They are Alexander M. Hawks, James A. Morgan, Silas Robinson and Marion Harper.

Three others who had been given tickets and who had posted $10 collateral, forfeited that amount when they could have gotten back $7 each by appearing in court. They are Leo Gan, Athoel E. Daymude and Nicholas N. Wright.
